BID COULD LOSE DESPITE KCC BACKING GOVERNMENT ON HUGE LEP

Enterprise Zone rules penalising Pfizer site

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

A CONTROVERSIAL ruling on how the Government will select its 10 remaining Enterprise Zones could hamper plans to regenerate the site occupied by drugs giant Pfizer.

The Department for Business says it expects to allocate no more than one zone per Local Enterprise Partnership area, meaning Kent could be penalised for being part of one of the largest LEPs in the country.

Firms that set up in Enterprise Zones (EZ) benefit through incentives such as business discount rates, lenient planning rules and superfast broadband.

Hopes of east Kent quickly being made an EZ by Chancellor George Osborne were dashed when he released details of his Budget, although Thanet's MPs were hopeful the area would be included in the next group of 10, to be named later this year.

But Kent's LEP partners in Essex and East Sussex will have their own ideas of where such an EZ should be located, meaning the Pfizer site in Sandwich could even fail to be nominated. The ruling is further vindication for those who opposed the formation of such a large LEP, including Medway Council which warned in September that it would only hamper Kent's economic progress.

It was originally proposed that Medway would form its own LEP with Kent, but that was changed amid speculation that Local Government Secretary Eric Pickles and Business Secretary Vince Cable had pressured Kent County Council into partnering up with Housing changes

COUNCIL house tenants and leaseholders are being promised a better service following the creation of a new organisation set up to manage council-owned properties.

East Kent Housing took over the management and maintenance of the 18,000 homes belonging to Thanet, Canterbury, Dover and Shepway on Friday.

It's the country's first super "arms length management organisation" (ALMO).

Scheme deals with your lack of garden

A GROUNDBREAKING scheme allowing gardening enthusiasts the chance to follow their passion without waiting years for an allotment has become an overnight success, writes Marijke Cox.

Ten gardens in Deal have been put forward for the new initiative, launched last month by environmental group Deal With It, where garden owners share their land with other members of the community.

The Deal Garden Share scheme was set up to allow gardening lovers an opportunity to cultivate a piece of land, growing plants and vegetables, without having to spend years on waiting lists for an allotment.

Garden owners who are unable to spend time managing their land can be paired up with a 'grower' and receive a share of the produce grown.

Mary Jackson, from Walmer, decided to share her garden with Simon Phillips, who lives in a gardenless flat in Deal.

She said: "I am really pleased to see my garden transformed."

"What had been a patch of weeds for many years has turned back into a managed vegetable plot."

"My 'grower' has put a lot of work into it over the last month. It is a great pleasure to see someone enjoying my garden again."

Mr Phillips added: "The scheme is working for me and is a fantastic idea. The plot is of the right size for me to manage and it is great to have someone to discuss ideas on what to grow."

FRUITFUL UNION: Flat dweller Simon Phillips has turned Mary Jackson's garden into a thriving vegetable patch thanks to the Deal With It scheme

The scheme, which is co-ordinated by Deal With It's Steve Wakeford, currently offers gardens of varying sizes and locations, from a few feet of vegetable patch to large plots of more than 60sq metres.

Mr Wakeford said: "We have a large plot near St Margaret's, fair sized gardens in Kingsdown, North Deal and Upper Walmer and several smaller plots throughout the town."

"We aim to try to match people's location, skills and ambition for growing local food."

"We've had a great response so far but would like to get more potential growers involved. People like the mutual benefit idea at the heart of the scheme."

As well as linking up members of the community and helping garden lovers follow their passion, Deal With It set up the initiative to cut food miles and reduce carbon footprints.

Mary Norton and Emma Barrett, both from Deal, will introduce their new business venture Beside the Sea, which sells seaside-themed ceramic decorations, garlands, cake plates and gravy boats.

Visitors to the event, which is being held on Walmer green from 8am to 4pm on May 2, will be able to enjoy more than 50 stalls featuring vintage clothing, housewares, military and musical memorabilia, arts and crafts, toys, books and jewellery.

The Canterbury Auction Galleries will be in attendance from 10am to 1pm, providing valuations for visitors who want to find out how to convert their collectables into cash.

Prices for stalls remain fixed at the 2010 rates of £30, £40 and £50 dependent on size.

KCC leader Cllr Paul Carter told KoS he would be writing to the Government in an attempt to change ministers' minds about the 'one EZ per LEP' ruling.

He said: "It doesn't seem right that having been encouraged to scale up and form one of the largest LEPs in the country with Essex and East Sussex, we are now being penalised."

"Compare that to Oxfordshire, which is a smaller county than Kent yet has its own LEP, and you can see how unfair this ruling is."

"I don't think they've thought it through and we have a good case to try to get that decision removed. We will protest and see where it gets us."

The Chancellor named 11 new enterprise zones, mainly in the North, as part of his Budget last week.

He ignored east Kent despite the potential loss of 5,000 jobs as a result of Pfizer leaving Sandwich next year.

Cllr Carter said he had not been expecting the Pfizer site to be among the first 11 zones, as the decision-making process had begun some time before the pharmaceutical giant announced it was pulling out of Kent.

He added that proposals for both the Pfizer EZ and another in the Thames Gateway area were both at advanced stages.

Meanwhile, a report by South East England Councils (SEEC) – of which Cllr Carter is chairman – is calling on the Government to help the region create more private sector jobs and to improve conditions in disadvantaged areas.

The study shows that even before the recession the South East had 850,000 people living in the 20 per cent most income-deprived areas.

Cllr Carter said: "We want to make sure the Government understands there is still significant deprivation in the South East and that the numbers living on the verge of poverty are substantial."

"People always seem to think we are excluded from deprivation when there are actually areas that are comparable in that respect to parts of the North and North East."

"But the money always seems to flow to the North and that's unfair."

Bed and breakfast flies up to victory on Channel 4 TV show

A THEMED bed and breakfast has been crowned the winner of the hospitality industry's answer to Come Dine With Me.

Blue Pigeons, located at Worth, between Deal and Sandwich, won Channel 4's Three in a Bed, which pits B&B owners against each other in a bid to be named among the best in the country.

Licensee Marilyn Coleman-Mellins was selected from hundreds of hopefuls willing to open up their businesses to the tough scrutiny of their competitors.

Using the same successful formula as Come Dine With Me, the show sees B&B owners taking it in turns to host one another.

They each then pay what they consider fair for their stay, with the highest paid accommodation winning the episode.

Ms Coleman-Mellins said she was "thrilled" to be crowned winner after competing against Stowberry House B&B in Somerset and Frome Dale in Dorset.

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

"It is an honour to have won this - I'm absolutely thrilled," she said. "We just made sure that the other contestants had a fantastic experience when they visited us, which is how we treat all of our guests."

The B&B, which is part of the Punch Tavern chain, has been running since 2009 and Ms Coleman-Mellins has transformed the Grade II-listed Georgian building into a multi-functional venue, offering a traditional pub experience.

Themed

The venue has four themed guest rooms in the house and two en-suite chalets in the secluded gardens.

Each room has a theme; the Johnny Cash theme, art deco, vintage and Spanish, which helped contribute to Ms Coleman-Mellins' success.

"I've always wanted to do something special with the Blue Pigeons as it's such a beautiful venue," she said. "We've done it up in a vintage but bohemian style so it really looks the part.

"My background is in music promotion so I saw an opportunity to bring that to life here. We offer live music and entertainment nights with rock 'n' roll and blues bands.

"We also offer jive dance lessons and even run a classic car and bike club for local enthusiasts."

A vaulted barn at the venue has also been transformed into a restaurant boasting fine dining.

The Three in a Bed episode aired last Thursday on Channel 4 at 8pm, but is still available to view at www.channel4.com/programmes/three-in-a-bed/40d.

Tenants to get better service

COUNCIL house tenants and leaseholders are being promised a better service following the creation of a new organisation set up to manage council-owned properties.

East Kent Housing took over the management and maintenance of the 18,000 homes belonging to Thanet, Canterbury, Dover and Shepway on Friday.

It's the country's first super "arms-length management organisation" (ALMO), which will be managed and owned by the four councils.

Tenants and leaseholders' rights and responsibilities will not change and the local authority will remain the owner and legal landlord of the council housing stock.

The council will still make decisions on the level of rent to charge and what improvements and major repairs will be carried out.

Brendan Ryan, interim managing director of East Kent Housing, said: "This is all about giving tenants and leaseholders a better service and involving them more in how services for them are run.

"By doing this, we can ensure that we're improving the things that matter most to them. Joining the four councils together also means we can make savings that we can then reinvest back into council housing in each area."

East Kent Housing will have to meet standards set by each council and will be responsible for looking after council estates, including grass, gardening and cleaning; managing home improvements, collecting rent and helping those struggling to pay and working with the police, council and other agencies to clamp down on anti-social behaviour.

Tenants and leaseholders are being updated about the new organisation through a local magazine and website www.eastkenthousing.org.uk.

About 220 staff will transfer from the four councils into East Kent Housing. The new organisation will be run by a board made up of four tenants or leaseholders, four councillors who represent the four council areas and four independent people.

'Vulnerable face isolation if free travel is cut back'

CAMPAIGNERS pushing to save bus services have warned of the damaging impact changes to free travel could have on vulnerable people, writes Marijke Cox.

Protesters from the Campaign for Better Transport say adjustments to the timetable for elderly and disabled pass holders could leave some at risk of social exclusion.

It followed the announcement by Kent County Council that it could no longer afford to fund free bus travel from 9am on weekdays, and the start time would be pushed back to 9.30am.

It means passengers entitled to subsidised transport will now have to pay if they wish to travel before 9.30am on Monday to Friday.

A council spokesman said for the past three years KCC had provided additional funding to allow pass holders to travel from 9am, but with a significant reduction in Government grants, this was no longer possible.

Concessionary

"As a result, KCC will operate a national standard scheme," he said.

"This means passes will be accepted from 9.30am to 11pm on Monday to Friday and all day at weekends and on bank holidays."

Changes to the concessionary travel scheme started on Friday, April 1.

Sophie Allain, bus campaigner at Campaign for Better Transport, urged the Kent community to put forward their views for the Save Our Buses movement.

She said: "Although half an hour may not seem much, it's important to remember that in rural areas we're talking about buses coming once an hour, or worse, once every two hours."

"This can change the day of elderly or disabled people. Having passes running from 9am helps people get out and stay active, it helps them get to a doctor's appointment and can stop them becoming socially excluded."

"People who make these decisions to cut services don't understand fully the impacts these changes could have."

Minimum

"They're cutting the bus service right back to the minimum."

The Campaign for Better Transport is urging people to submit their comments to help the organisation build a case against the cuts.

"Kent County Council is in a difficult position, and decisions like this are there to be made," said Ms Allain.

"But buses should not just be an easy cut to make. It can create a false economy where money has to be spent later, when people need more help."

"Our campaign looks to show Government the impact these cuts will have. We want to empower people to have a say on this."

Ms Allain said combining factors such as council and commercial bus cuts and the 20 per cent slash to the fuel tax rebate for buses could mean £100 million in funding lost from the network.

"Buses could be tipped into a spiral of decline from which they will struggle to recover."

Anyone wishing to join the campaign can visit www.bettertransport.org.uk/campaigns/save-our-buses.

County escapes major losses in arts funding

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

ARTS organisations throughout Kent have been spared the brunt of a £100 million cut in government funding.

More than 200 groups across the UK learned this week that they would not be receiving a share of the remaining £1.4 billion available through Arts Council England.

But the majority of Kent applicants were satisfied with their three-year settlements for 2012-15, with the county achieving the best share of funding in the South East.

Successful organisations include the Turner Contemporary gallery in Margate, which will receive £1.7m over three years, and Stour Valley Arts in Ashford, which will see an 83 per cent increase to £360,000.

Kent County Council's cabinet member for communities, Cllr Mike Hill, said: "Kent has achieved the best settlement in the South East and we believe this acknowledges the ambition and resourcefulness of Kent's passion for arts and culture."

"Some organisations will fear they have lost out by not being successful and so our arts development unit will work closely with any who now feel they need additional support."

The arts groups that will continue to receive funding will be known as National Portfolio Organisations, and will use the investment to develop their own work while sharing their expertise with others.

One such NPO will be the Canterbury Festival, which will receive £450,000 funding over the three years in question.

Director Rosie Turner said: "We are very pleased and relieved that the Arts Council has awarded us a generous amount of funding, which represents an uplift of 36 per cent on our previous core funding position."

"It means the festival will be able to continue to provide high quality international arts events during October."

The Propeller Theatre Company and People United, both also based in Canterbury, are among the charities due to receive Arts Council England cash for the first time.

However, the future looks bleak for the Maidstone-based Disability Arts Development Agency (Dada) South, which will lose all of its funding from 2013.

Dada director Stevie Rice said: "We have heard time and time again about the Arts Council's commitment to diversity, so to withdraw essential funding from organisations working to represent and support diverse artists and their practice is inexplicable."

Arts Council England said it had not followed an "equal cuts for all" policy and had made decisions on a case-by-case basis.

Little birds' big news for survey

SMALL birds are making a comeback in Kent according to the 20,000 people who took part in this year's Big Garden Bird Watch.

Breeds including the long-tailed tit, coal tit and goldcrest were the worst affected by the harsh winter of 2009-10, but their numbers were up in the county this year.

Organised by the RSPB, the Bird Watch revealed that starlings are the most commonly seen in Kent gardens, followed by house sparrows and blue tits.

THE INTERVIEW

BY ED HILL

Artist finally shows etchings

ART has been a major part of Joyce Marriott's life since she was 16, but it was not until her later years that she was able to pursue her passion for etching.

The 86-year-old from Thanet trained at Croydon College of Art during World War Two.

She said: "I came from an artistic family. I lived in Blackburn and was halfway through a degree when the art school closed because of the war. My aunt lived in Croydon and said why don't you come down here to train?"

"It was an entertaining move, because there was a lot of bombing at that time, but the college did carry on through the war. I remember going into London one day on the train and as we crossed the Thames a massive bomb dropped nearby. The whole carriage rocked and we thought we would end up in the water. Fortunately, it staggered into Victoria Station and we all got out with our knees shaking."

Unfortunately for Joyce, etching was off the curriculum.

She said: "Because of the bombing, the acid needed for etching was considered too hazardous to have around."

After graduating she was offered a job at the advertising giant JW Thompson, but because of the war effort decided to take up teaching.

Retirement

For the next 40 years it was her main occupation, in diverse places including Africa and Ford Open Prison.

She said: "I went to Uganda with my husband under an education scheme and became a mother of three lovely girls."

"We taught there for 10 years, then came back to this country and I continued teaching until I reached retirement."

Sadly for Joyce, her husband, John then suffered a severe stroke, which meant much of her time was spent caring for him. It was around this time she had the chance to discover etching for the first time.

She said: "Just before I retired I went to two etching classes. A friend of mine gave me a shed and I found an old mangle and started using it as a press. Eventually I got a proper press and started etching more carefully."

Because of her husband's condition, Joyce's art was mainly a pastime, but she continued to explore and develop her own style.

Inspired by cartoonists such as David Lowe, she has created simple line drawings on a diverse range of themes.

She said: "I was brought up with cartoons. My father was passionately political and liked people like David Lowe, who satirised Hitler."

Etching became Joyce's main passion and PASTIME: Artist Joyce Marriott's etchings cover a range of subjects and styles, inspired by political cartoonists and life around her it gave the spritely pensioner a new lease of life, developing her work.

She said: "It is a lovely process. It gives you a kind of jerky line and you get unexpected outcomes. Sometimes a little bit of ink it can give the impression of something like a cloud. The best thing is that you can repeat the process. You can try different things every time you make a copy and select the ones that you think really work."

Since her husband died in 2004, Joyce has been able to devote more time to her art. She has built up a growing reputation and her work has been exhibited not only in Kent but also at the Barbican in London and in galleries in Paris, Germany and for the British Council in Malta.

Now her etchings can be seen at The White Horse Inn at Boughton-Under-Blean. Pub manager Tara Birks had worked with Joyce for an exhibition in Ramsgate and knew she wanted to have her pictures on her walls.

Joyce said: "I am delighted that Tara remembered my work. The pub has connections with Chaucer and ghosts so I think I might get inspired by them."

Joyce said: "Etching has been the joy of my life. When I got fed up with things I could go into my shed and it was my own paradise."

Joyce's work will be on display at the White Horse Inn until the summer.

Survey gives thumbs up to doubling daylight saving time

ALMOST half of Kent residents support putting the clocks forward by another hour, according to a new survey.

Despite losing an hour of sleep last weekend, research by energy firm npower suggests support is growing for a move to the SDST (single double summertime) system proposed in the Daylight Saving Bill.

Such a change would result in the clocks going forward an extra hour to Greenwich Mean Time (GMT) +1 in winter, and GMT+2 in summer.

Basing its research on a survey of 3,000 Kent residents, npower revealed that opposition to SDST had dropped dramatically from 47 per cent last October to just 27 per cent in March. Forty-three per cent are now in favour of the change while 30 per cent are unsure.

Npower spokeswoman Emily Stagg said: "It's interesting to note the significant shift in opinion since our last research. This could very well be attributed to Brits enduring five months of dark mornings and evenings and longing for the return of British summertime last week."

"One of the main reasons for the fall in opposition is the promise of lower electric bills. However, it may still be some time before SDST becomes legislation."

A bill requiring the Government to conduct analysis of the costs and benefits of shifting the clocks forward received MPs' initial approval in December. However, the proposal was not included in the Government's recent tourism strategy, despite reports it would be.

Visit Kent chief executive Sandra

Matthews-Marsh is among those backing a change to SDST, claiming the extra hour would be good for tourism in the county, giving us more evening time to enjoy.

Daylight saving was first proposed in the UK by Bromley builder William Willett (1856-1915), whose suggestion was supported by future Prime Minister and Westerham resident Winston Churchill.

'It's time to solve Operation Stack'

A HIGH-LEVEL summit has been called to find a resolution to Operation Stack chaos and end the traffic misery of Kent's motorists, writes Marijke Cox.

Folkestone and Hythe MP Damian Collins told KoS the meeting was vital in reaching a solution to the problem that has been plaguing drivers for the past two decades.

"There have been no serious discussions like this for years and I think if everyone is in one room, around a table, looking at all the options, things can move forward," he said.

Kent Police's Chief Constable Ian Learmonth, County Hall leader Cllr Paul Carter and the heads of Dover, Ashford and Shepway councils will be attending the meeting on July 8, along with MPs and representatives for the Channel Tunnel and ferry companies.

"This is the right time to sit down and solve the problems associated with Operation Stack," said Mr Collins, who called for the discussions. "We need to find a workable solution."

PARKED: Operation Stack blocks the M20

Operation Stack involves parking lorries on the M20 between junctions 11 (Hythe) and 12 (Cheriton), with cars directed along the A20.

During severe disruption of cross-Channel travel, phase two is implemented which sees lorries also parked between junction eight (Maidstone) and junction nine (Ashford).

Operation Stack causes the roads around Dover, Shepway and Ashford to become gridlocked, which has led to a subsequent loss of business for local firms. Delays also cost the UK's haulage companies £1 million a day.

Mr Collins said issues such as the way lorries are booked onto ferries must be considered.

"At the moment ferry companies don't necessarily take freight on a first come first serve basis, they take them on bookings," he said. "This is something that must be looked at."

Mr Collins said the lorry park plan at Aldington, near Sellindge, would no doubt be raised at the meeting.

Kent County Council first proposed the creation of a dual purpose Operation Stack and overnight lorry park near the M20 three years ago. Plans were for lorries to be directed to wait at the site when there were disruptions to cross-Channel services.

The overnight park would be able to hold 500 lorries and if Operation Stack was in place, an overflow area would hold an additional 2,500 HGVs.

Kent Police and the Freight Transport Association supported the proposals.

But there was fierce opposition from residents in Sellindge and Aldington who formed the Lorry Park Alliance Group.

Government then announced in January it would not fund the £35m expected to cover the costs of the park.

KCC may now look to draw up a new plan which could see costs reduced, but still see the park located at Aldington.

The county's branch of Campaign to Protect Rural England, Protect Kent, however, suggested last month that the lorry park be built on reclaimed land near Dover.

Chairman of the group Richard Knox-Johnston said around 6,000 freight vehicles could be held in a carefully-designed facility with minimal impact on the environment.

The upcoming meeting, which is being held at Shepway District Council, will see representatives from the different groups debate the various options.

Mr Collins added: "I'm encouraging the community to write to me with ideas so we can look at those at the meeting."

Pay fund protest

UNION members have protested against plans to remove £2.25 million from Kent County Council's fund for 'pay progression'.

The proposal could result in some staff earning less in performance-related pay increases, but KCC says the available money will instead be prioritised for its lowest-paid workers.

Unison and GMB members demonstrated outside County Hall in Maidstone on Monday, saying the move will effect the local economy because there will be less for staff to spend.

Cllr Roger Gough, cabinet member for business strategy and support, said: "We value all employees and the contribution they make.

"We are taking very difficult decisions in response to this year's financial settlement and believe this is a sensible and pragmatic way to minimise redundancies.

"The proposed changes will allow us to reward staff as fairly and appropriately as we can while meeting the savings we need to make."

Sporting legacy

STUDENTS are being encouraged to take up or get back into sports thanks to National Lottery funding.

Canterbury Christ Church University has secured £174,053 from Sport England to encourage more people to take up sports as part of the mass participation legacy from the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The Try Sport project will provide a variety of sporting activities to help improve student participation, with qualified coaches holding sessions in archery, badminton and hockey, among others.

Dr Andrew Baldson, Christ Church's director of sport, said: "Our aim is to work in partnership with national bodies and local providers, especially sports clubs, where we can integrate our students into playing sport in the community while they are studying."

Children ‘must have right to know both their parents’

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

A BACKBENCH MP is spearheading a campaign to make it a legal right for children to know both their parents.

Dover and Deal representative Charlie Elphicke, one of Kent's newest MPs, raised the issue while introducing his Children Bill in Parliament on Tuesday. He said he wanted to make sure there was a "clear and enforceable right" of a child to grow up knowing both their mother and father.

"There are three million children who live apart from a parent in the UK, about one million of whom have no contact with the non-resident parent three years after separation," he said.

"Too often people say it is about mums' rights or dads' rights, but actually it is about the rights of a child to know and have a relationship with both their parents."

"That is the nub of what the bill is about. It is not right that parents should sink their children's rights to know them in a sea of acrimony when they split up."

Mr Elphicke's proposals are contained in a Ten Minute Bill, which is unlikely to progress into law unless the Government decides to throw its weight behind the measure. MPs use the device as a way of gaining publicity for an issue.

In a timely coincidence to Mr Elphicke's plea, on Thursday new legal powers were granted to grandparents to guarantee them access to their grandchildren in the event of divorce. Separated parents will be expected to make sure grandparents continue to play a part in the children's lives.

IN THE MIDDLE: Children should have a legal right to know both parents in the event of a split, says Charlie Elphicke MP

To support his bill, Mr Elphicke referred to a soldier who was told by a judge he was "unreasonable" for wanting to see his six-year-old daughter – who was at the centre of a contact battle between the parents – before being deployed to Afghanistan.

"In January, he applied for a specific order so he could see his daughter before he went to serve his country and possibly not come back," said Mr Elphicke.

"The judge said it was unreasonable of him to ask and he should wait until October, 2011, before the court would resume proceedings [of the original contact case].”

Mr Elphicke, who stressed this was not just about fathers but mothers too, also gave an example of one of his own constituents.

"Mr G of Dover writes to me, saying: 'I understand as they are my children I should help towards their upbringing, but surely this should not just involve paying my ex money and only speaking to them on a Sunday morning for 30 minutes.'"

Mr Elphicke said putting the Bill before the House of Commons was to send a message to the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service; "weak-kneed" judges; and parents with residence orders, that it is about children's rights to grow up knowing both their parents.

An argument raised in response to the bill focused on the welfare of a child in relation to domestic violence.

But campaign group Families Need Fathers praised Mr Elphicke. Chief executive Craig Pickering said: "I am very glad Charlie is contributing to this debate. The Government's review of family justice will affect children and parents for decades to come."

The bill will be considered for a second time on Friday, May 13.

Town gallery named after Sgt Pepper album artist

THE man behind the famous cover art for the seminal Sgt Peppers Lonely Hearts Club Band album has had a gallery named after him in Gravesend, writes Chris Murphy.

Now his gallery is welcoming its first visitors, after officially being opened by Gravesend Borough Council's director for communities Melanie Norris.

It's an obvious location for the gallery – Sir Peter went to art school in the town for five years.

Sadly, he was not able to be at the opening, but does have plans to visit soon, the council said.

He said: "The fact that I was at art school in Gravesend from 1946-1951 makes it a town that I regard with great affection."

"Culture in all its forms is a vital part of life and public access is tremendously important. I have always found museums and galleries to be enriching sources of inspiration and I'm delighted that Gravesend Borough Council has chosen to name this space after me."

Sir Peter, 78, was born in Dartford and had his first solo exhibition in 1960. He went on to become an icon of British pop art.

He has often complained he was only paid a £200 flat fee for the Sgt Pepper cover, and no royalties.

Of the new gallery, Ms Norris said: "This is a fantastic new facility which can be used by anybody, in or out of the borough."

"The RivArt exhibition is a wonderful collection which really showcases some of this town's talented artists. I cannot think of a better collection to debut in The Blake Gallery's first exhibition."

Local art group RivArt has put on Maiden Voyage, a free exhibition featuring artists including Adam Pickering, Barbara Blun, Rosalind Munday, Glenn Fitzpatrick, Gino Generoso Napoliello and Liz Howe. It runs until April 29 and the gallery will be open weekdays from 9am to 5pm.

For details call 01474 337 896 or email thegallery@gravesend.gov.uk.

KENT County Council leader Cllr Paul Carter has defended the authority's use of expensive employment agencies to secure the services of temporary members of staff.

Last month KoS exclusively revealed how, despite planning to cut 1,500 jobs over the next four years, the council had been paying more than £2,000 per day in agency fees for just three people.

The authority had also made a one-off payment of £165,000 to fund the work of one man, Jeff Hawkins, who has been brought in to oversee an ongoing staff restructure.

But while admitting he would prefer to appoint permanent members of staff, Cllr Carter said it was not always an option.

"There are a number of senior directors who are no longer with us," he said. "We are going through a recruitment process which can take anything from three to six months,

Expensive agency staff 'a cost-effective option'

if not longer, but we've still got to run the business in that time.

"Sometimes you can fill roles by promoting people temporarily and seeing how they perform, which is always to be encouraged, but when you have significant gaps in your workforce and the experience isn't there to fill them, you have to go outside."

Consultancy

KoS revealed last month how the interim managing director of children, families and education – Malcolm Newsam – has cost taxpayers £1,250 a day in agency fees since January 4, and continues to do so.

Similarly, Eva Learner was brought in on a consultancy basis last November to support a review of social work practice, and will cost £525 a day in agency fees until at least June.

The council also paid an agency £680 a day for the services of Pam Rowe, employed as interim service improvement manager from the beginning of December, 2010, to the end of February this year.

Cllr Carter said: "The interim market is a growing market as the public sector employs fewer people at a high level."

"It's a cost-effective way of carrying out specialist assignments. The rates may be higher but you save money by not having to pay for things like sickness, holidays and pensions."

"Jeff Hawkins is carrying out a hugely complicated and time-consuming job in reshaping an organisation that employs more than 35,000 people. That's a bespoke service."

Cllr Carter also refuted suggestions that the chopping and changing of staff would have a detrimental impact on the performance of certain departments, such as the children's social services department, that has been ordered to clean up its act after being rated as "poor" by Ofsted.

"Malcolm Newsam is probably the best person in the country to transform children's services," said Cllr Carter. "He's enormously well-qualified and he's just getting on with the job."

"We were able to get him in very quickly (following the voluntary redundancy of predecessor Rosalind Turner), which is one of the benefits of employing staff through an agency. We didn't have to wait for him to leave his job."

The staff restructure at KCC – entitled Change to Keep Succeeding – has led to a slimming-down in the number of directorates along with a reduction in senior managers.

Cllr Carter admitted the restructure had proved unpopular with several high-paid workers, who have since taken voluntary redundancy.

He said: "There may have been some individuals coming to the end of their careers who enjoyed working in a siloed (airtight) structure and did not have an appetite for change."

Blighline in administration

REFRIGERATION giant Blighline has entered into administration, with debts of about £6 million.

The firm's management said they were left with no alternative, having been badly hit by "deteriorating trading conditions".

Deloitte administrators were appointed on March 23.

Partner Carlton Siddle said: "We will continue to trade whilst seeking a sale as a going concern."

"The administration team will work closely with management, customers and suppliers during this time to ensure operations continue as normal."

Blighline Ltd bosses tried to restructure the Canterbury-based business in 2010, taking the number of employees down from 200 to 120. However, the firm, based at Lakesview Business Park, Westbere, was ultimately unable to stave off administration.

The company built up a £25 million annual turnover through sales of refrigeration and display equipment to supermarkets and the catering industry.

Campaigners call for no vote in AV ballot

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

ANTI-AV campaigners have launched an awareness drive to ensure Kent people understand how they may be affected by a change in the electoral system.

In addition to choosing their local councillors on May 5, voters will also be asked to have their say in only the second national referendum in UK history.

They will be asked to choose between the current first-past-the-post electoral system and the Alternative Vote (AV) method proposed by the Liberal Democrats.

Under the AV system, voters rank candidates in order of preference, with anyone receiving more than 50 per cent of the vote elected.

Otherwise, the person with the fewest votes is eliminated and their backers' second choices counted.

Kent county councillor Keith Ferrin is the Conservatives' referendum co-ordinator for the South East, and on Monday launched a No to AV awareness drive outside County Hall in Maidstone.

"There's nothing wrong with the BALLOT: The public will be voting on how we run general elections present system, and a change would not only be expensive but also lead to unfairness," he said.

"People wouldn't decide the result of an election at the ballot box. It would be decided by politicians sitting in a room after the votes have been cast, because AV would only lead to more hung parliaments."

Conservative chairwoman Baroness Warsi said this week that a change to AV would result in more votes and legitimacy for minor parties such as the BNP, a view Cllr Ferrin agrees with.

He said: "It gives undue influence to people who vote for minor parties."

"As a Conservative, the chances are that my vote will only be counted once. But people who vote for parties like the BNP could see their votes counted five or six times."

"I don't think many people in Kent are even aware of the referendum, and those who are perhaps don't quite understand the issues. That's why we want to raise awareness and encourage people to use their vote come May 5."

The Lib Dems have long campaigned for a switch to an electoral model that is more favourable to smaller parties, and secured the AV referendum as a condition of entering into coalition with the Tories.

Other supporters of the Yes to AV campaign include Labour leader Ed Miliband, the Green Party, and the UK Independence Party.

Lib Dem county councillor Ian Chittenden said: "A change to AV will make MPs work harder because they will have to achieve 50 per cent of the vote. There won't be any more safe seats, and any complacency will go out the window."

"It will also give voters the opportunity to rank candidates in order of preference, which will provide a much fairer balance. I'm very much supportive of it."

PUMPED: Hauliers may protest again

Haulier sunk by fuel prices

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

FUEL protesters have vowed to continue their fight for lower duty with warnings that haulage firms will be killed off by pump prices.

Leading haulage company Derek Linch Ltd, in Romney Marsh, is the latest to sink under the pressure of sky-rocketing fuel costs.

Facing European competition and fears of spiralling into debt, owner Mr Linch took the decision to go into voluntary liquidation after 33 years in business.

He said: "Since fuel started going up in January 2010, my fuel bill has risen by £20,000.

"Joseph Rice and Son, which is a haulage firm in Gloucester, closed just before me, after trading for 161 years. This was because of fuel prices.

"We will see more closing. Fuel costs were instrumental in my own decision to close."

Mr Linch, who helped organise fuel protests in 1999 and 2000 calling for Government to introduce an essential-user rebate for hauliers, said last week's Budget announcement by Chancellor George Osborne did not go far enough.

Mr Osborne scrapped the 1p increase in fuel duty and cancelled this month's planned 4p rise.

He also announced the introduction of a fair fuel stabiliser, which was a pre-election pledge by the Tories last year.

The stabiliser would see fuel duty fall when oil prices rise.

Mr Linch said: "This isn't enough. More needs to be done, especially about European lorry drivers coming over here with 2,000 litres of diesel in their tank, driving for free on our roads and taking work from British hauliers. There should be an essential fuel allowance for hauliers here. Without this, other firms will close.

"Things will go back to how they were in 1999 and 2000, and hauliers will begin to protest again."

Campaign group Fair Fuel UK, spearheaded by Lib Dem Shepway councillor Peter Carroll and led by former Top Gear presenter Quentin

Willson, have been pushing for the Government to introduce a fair fuel stabiliser and cut fuel prices.

The team said the Budget was a step in the right direction, but that prices were still too high.

Recent figures from motoring organisation the AA found average UK petrol and diesel prices had risen by up to 5p per litre between February and March.

Golf club venue free for tsunami fundraisers

CHART Hills golf club in Biddenden is waiving venue fees for companies, societies or groups of individuals wishing to hold fundraising events in aid of the British Red Cross Japan Tsunami Appeal.

Until the end of April, those planning a charity golf day for 10 or more teams of four players can use the venue free of charge.

All event organisers must demonstrate that their golf day will be raising funds to help those affected by the Japanese disaster and that all cash raised will go directly to the Japan Tsunami Appeal.

Course staff will assist with organisation and running the day. They can also give advice on setting up additional fundraising streams..

Use of all venues is subject to availability, and the offer does not include food and drink costs.

Anyone planning an event in aid of the Japan Tsunami Appeal should contact the British Red Cross by emailing amburton@redcross.org.uk.

Rail firm ordered to

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

UNDER-fire train firm Southeastern could be fined if it fails to give passengers adequate information about services during disrupted periods.

It follows major problems during the cold snap in December where commuters were left stranded on platforms or on trains with little communication from the operator.

At the time, passengers said they accepted there would be problems during the heavy snow, but they slammed Southeastern for the shocking lack or inaccuracy and information.

In response to the complaints, the Office of Rail Regulation (ORR) has proposed to introduce a set of rules, which could see operators fined if they fail to provide sufficient information to customers.

Chairwoman of the group, Anna Walker, said a national survey carried out by independent watchdog Passenger Focus showed only two in five passengers were satisfied with information provided during delays.

"Passengers need reliable information to make and plan their journeys and, with the strides made in communication technology in the 21st century, Britain's rail industry can and must deliver," she said.

"We are all agreed that delivery of accurate and timely passenger information is crucial – particularly so during times of disruption, such as were experienced last winter when passengers were let down again."

A consultation was opened this week looking at the proposals, and if approved, the changes could be rolled out as soon as autumn.

Ms Walker added: "The consultation launched underpins the rail industry's drive to deliver improved passenger information – clarifying responsibilities and making delivery of plans already in place a requirement with the independent regulator able to take action against any poor performers who let the side down."

Two weeks ago, Southeastern was granted a two-year extension of its contract despite coming under fire for poor service during the winter months and excessive fare increases.

chaos first hand – called for the operator to be stripped of its contract altogether.

Speaking in response to ORR's proposals, Mr Reckless, who accused Southeastern of treating its franchise as a "cash cow", said: "During the snow in December, information provision was abysmal and I am delighted that in future they may be fined if they continue to let down the travelling public."

Managing director Charles Horton said the company would focus its efforts on improving punctuality and information.

A Southeastern spokesman said as an industry, rail firms know there is more to do.

"Our two priorities are to continue to improve punctuality and information during times of disruption," he said.

"We are already working hard with Network Rail and the industry to ensure that our passengers will see improvements."

The spokesman added that the problems with information last winter were to do with Network Rail's Integrated Train Planning System, which failed to upload the correct timetables, meaning online and electronic boards were incorrect.

A survey by Passenger Focus was used as part of the plans drawn up by ORR, where more than 1,000 passengers were asked to give feedback on rail performance.

Chief executive of the watchdog, Anthony Smith, said passengers reported chaotic experiences, where some were left standing on station platforms, not knowing when or if a train would come.

"Others told stories of being stranded in unfamiliar conditions in sub-zero temperatures without help and advice," he said.

"If passengers arrive at the station and the service bears no resemblance to the information sourced at home, it is doubly frustrating."

"After last year's snow disruption and the resulting failure to communicate in a timely way to all affected passengers, it is clear that something has to be done."

"Train operators are working to improve the information they put out."

"This move by the regulator will give the operators an extra incentive to get it right."

'Check out my Hook'

FORMER popstar Vanilla Ice is set to woo audiences – as Captain Hook in his first-ever pantomime.

The global celebrity will take to the stage in this year's production of Peter Pan at the Central Theatre, in Chatham.

Ice – real name Robert Matthew Van Winkle – rose to fame with his 1991 hit Ice Ice Baby.

This and his music video – which showcased his distinctive dance moves – saw Ice win numerous music awards.

More recently, he was a contestant on Dancing on Ice 2011, and will appear in the UK tour of the programme in April.

He is also filming this year for a new film, and has taken part in numerous reality TV programmes.

PANTO DEBUT: Rap star Vanilla ice

Ice will now play the pirate villain Captain Hook when Peter Pan begins its run in Chatham on Friday, December 9. The show will perform until Monday, January 2.

Ironically, his first album was called Hooked.

Tony Hill, the general manager at The Central Theatre, Chatham, said: "Over the past few years we have had some great names at our pantomimes."

"It is fantastic news that we have booked the internationally famous star Vanilla Ice for this year's pantomime Peter Pan."

"Ice is a huge name who I am sure will be a really big draw for parents and children alike, because of his musical and film career as well as his appearance on Dancing on Ice."

THE river ecosystem and wildlife is under threat from an increase in households' demands for water, according to campaigners.

The Our Rivers campaign, backed by the WWF and the RSPB, is calling on the Government to take action on the rivers in England and Wales that are threatened.

The Kentish River Stour, which starts near Ashford, runs through Canterbury and flows into the English Channel at Pegwell Bay, is one of the UK's rivers they say is seriously threatened by the increase in demand for water, due to new developments.

This is expected to worsen as demand for water grows, due to development pressure in areas such as Ashford.

Due to their clear waters and relatively stable temperature and flow regimes, chalk rivers provide a unique habitat that is important for species such as white-clawed crayfish, otters, brown trout and the UK's fastest declining mammal, the water vole.

Steve Gilbert, of the RSPB South East, said: "Preserving Kent's chalk rivers, for people and for wildlife, will depend upon a number of measures, one of which is to reduce water abstraction to restore natural flow."

"The problems caused by over-abstraction will only get worse as demand increases in developing areas."

"The Our Rivers campaign is calling on the Government to act quickly on the results of its own research and tackle the issue."

"It has already identified 148 cases where over-abstraction is damaging rivers and the wildlife they support, but there has been no action to reduce the amount of water taken."

The Wild Trout Trust is also backing the campaign, because the fresh water and migrating sea trout populations in the Stour are threatened with extinction if their habitats are not protected.

The Trust's conservation officer, Andy

Higher demand for water 'poses risk to river life'

Thomas, said: "There are several implications if over-abstraction does occur in rivers such as the Stour."

"Firstly, the stream can be heavily impacted by low flow. This affects the migration of the trout, meaning they are more prone to being eaten by predators and they are more likely to be stressed and prone to disease."

"Secondly, there is the issue of climate change and its impact. Water temperature can increase due to the reduced surface area of the river, which will dramatically affect the river ecosystem."

South East Water, which controls water and waste management throughout most of Kent, is keen to protect water resources.

A spokesman said: "We don't extract from the Stour and we are very environmentally minded. Each day, South East Water takes more than 565 million litres of water from the environment and supplies it to about 2.1 million customers."

"This water is taken principally from underground aquifers, but also from rivers and surface reservoirs, within strict limits set by the Environment Agency."

Offer your child a complete bilingual education in france

Just a stone's throw from England, Boulogne-sur-Mer is a typical French town that is renowned for a warm welcome!

Charles Dickens called Boulogne his 'favorite French watering place', her beautiful Notre Dame Cathedral is reminiscent of St Paul's, her melted chesher and ham speciality is a 'rarebit' to be reckoned with, add a hint of 'Pudding de Noël', 'moules frites' and 'crème caramel' and you have the delectable evidence of a long lasting love affair between Boulogne and England.

Providing a supportive environment

We recognise that for parents, sending a child to study abroad is a major emotional investment. We aim to ensure the personal development and well-being of each pupil within our care. Students are embarking on a new experience, far from home. The boarding school is a place of work but also a place for exchange and cohesion. Their individual abilities and differences naturally bring the group together; they help each other, take time to listen to one another and share experiences.

Accommodation

The boarding school is new and purpose built, it offers facilities to accommodate 40 children in the International Section. The building comprises bedrooms with on suite bathrooms... Three children share a room and dispose of a single bed with desk and chair. There are facilities for special needs, particularly for those physically challenged. The small number of pupils means that we can give them the individual attention they will need, particularly in the first weeks away from home. Two teacher assistants, one male and one female, are on hand day and night in the boarding school to help with homework and offer moral assistance and help to ensure their well-being.

One can only become truly bilingual when one shares both the language and the culture of a country

Generally a bilingual education in France is only available in private schools but the proximity of Boulogne to England and our shared history have encouraged the County Council for the Pas-de-Calais to develop an international section at the centrally situated Collège Daunou. English speaking children can now learn to speak and write French alongside French children of their own age in a truly French environment.

Collège Daunou aims to follow the path of the much acclaimed French education system

France offers state-run and private schools at all levels and the educational standards are high. The rigorous curriculum is dictated by the Ministry of Education and is virtually the same across the country and in French overseas territories. The French educational philosophy emphasizes : the authority of the Teacher; individual competition including an absolute grading system; stress is on analytical thought and students are frequently expected to learn by heart. Academic expectations are high. Sports are encouraged in and out of school, the variety of after school sports is particularly wide.

Real France real close

Over 200 crossings a day between Calais and Dover. Eurotunnel 35 minutes. Eurostar 55 minutes (from London). P+O and Seafarce 90 minutes from Dover. Boulogne is just a 30 minute drive from Calais via the A16 toll free motorway.

It's city living, late Roman style

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

ANCIENT Roman cities from around the Mediterranean will be explored as part of a fascinating project being led by the University of Kent.

Thanks to more than £180,000 funding from the Leverhulme Trust, a team of archaeologists will study artwork and excavated artefacts belonging to the 'late antique' period (AD 300-650) from sites in Turkey, Tunisia and Italy.

Led by Dr Luke Lavan, from the university's School of European Culture and Languages, the scholars aim to achieve a clearer understanding of what urban life was like for people living in the latter years of the Roman Empire right through to the Middle Ages.

"Few films or TV programmes seek to visualise everyday life in late antiquity," said Dr Lavan.

"Most people simply cannot imagine the Mediterranean cities of this period, such as Carthage as known to Augustine, Jerusalem as known to Mohammed, or Constantinople (now Istanbul) as known to Justinian.

"This was a critical period in the development of European civilisation, yet it is remarkable how little is known about the daily rhythms of city life.

"When most people close their eyes they can probably imagine urban life from earlier periods, in places like Rome or Pompeii, but that is not the case for late antiquity."

ARTEFACT: A sixth century coin depicting Emperor Justinian I, from the late antique period

Kent is blessed with a rich archaeological heritage from the late antique era, ranging from the 4th century Lullingstone Roman Villa in the Darent Valley to the early medieval settlement archaeology discovered at Canterbury, Lyminge and other sites across the county.

In addition to exploring the architecture of the period, the three-year project in the Mediterranean – entitled Visualising the Late Antique City – also aims to unearth a more vivid image of the lawyers, clergy, urchins, prostitutes and others who lived during the time.

The research will be published as both an academic document and an illustrated catalogue, and will be made accessible to filmmakers, authors, museums and the general public so they can gain a better understanding of the period in question.

Dr Lavan said that excavations of late antique sites reveal well-preserved evidence due to the period forming the final layer at most locations before they were abandoned.

He added: "Buildings often survive intact to their roof-line, with internal fittings such as ovens, cupboards and shop counters.

"Statue bases can survive in situ, while pavement markings, graffiti and official notices reveal the locations of market stalls or political meetings."

Kent group joins protest against cuts

PROTESTORS from across Kent were among a crowd of up to 500,000 who marched through London to demonstrate their anger at Government spending cuts, writes Steve Knight.

The mass rally was organised by the Trades Union Congress (TUC) and promoted at a county level by a collaboration of 10 of the UK's biggest trade unions known collectively as Kent - Save Our Services.

Chairwoman Zoe Van Dyke, of the public service union Unison, told KoS she was delighted with the turnout at last Saturday's march, despite the actions of a minority of protestors who vandalised businesses.

She said: "It was very uplifting and good to see that people felt the issue was important enough to make the effort."

"The march was the first step in the process of making it clear to the Government that the majority of people disagree with the cuts."

The TUC said 250,000-500,000 people attended the march from Embankment to Hyde Park, which passed off without incident.

But trouble erupted after a separate group, wearing scarves to mask their faces, attacked stores at Oxford Street before heading to Piccadilly and Trafalgar Square.

"I don't think the violence was justified

and it didn't do our cause a great deal of good," said Ms Van Dyke.

"You have to wonder if the people involved were actually interested in what we were marching for, but I don't think their actions detracted from it, because on the whole the demonstration was very peaceful."

"We should be concentrating on the volume of people who attended and what it says about public feeling. We didn't vote for this decimation of public services."

The disturbances at the march formed the basis of a debate in the House of Commons on Monday, when Canterbury Tory MP Julian Brazier accused those who took part in even the peaceful aspects of the demonstration of "foolishness".

He also criticised Labour leader Ed Miliband for his speech to the protestors, in he claimed the march came "in the tradition" of the suffragettes, the US civil rights movement and the anti-apartheid campaign.

Mr Brazier said: "In rightly condemning the extreme behaviour of a few hundred people we are in danger of losing sight of the essential foolishness of the perfectly legitimate, but misguided, demonstration."

Meanwhile, North Thanet MP Roger Gale has lodged a formal complaint with the BBC over its coverage of the march.

The senior Tory backbencher claims the broadcaster has become "partial to an unacceptable degree" after first referring to the Coalition as "the Tory Government" before airing an interview with Treasury minister Justine Greening, whose comments were "distracted" by live images of the protests.

A MAN is facing criminal charges after allegedly faking his own death.

Anthony Brendan McErlean, 66, of Swarling Hill Road, Petham, Canterbury, has been charged with fraud.

It is claimed that between December 5, 2009, and May 31, 2010, he made a false claim to an insurance company to claim death benefit of £520,000 by faking his own death in Honduras.

He appeared at Canterbury Magistrates Court on Wednesday and has been remanded in custody until April 6 when he will again appear at Canterbury Magistrates Court.

FIREFIGHTERS tackled a blaze aboard a ship ironically named the Ocean Dragon.

Six fire engines were sent to Ramsgate Harbour at about 11.15pm on Tuesday, following reports of a fire that broke out in the vessel's engine room.

About 30 crew members from the Ramsgate, Thanet and Margate crews helped tackled the blaze, while a height vehicle, command support unit and water unit were also at the scene.

Ramsgate watch manager David Halls said: "The incident was quite challenging as crews had to work in a confined space."

Firefighters tackled the blaze using a hose reel and main jet.

Three great ways to win

It's going to be a busy spring at Leeds Castle, and to celebrate we've teamed up with the historic landmark to offer these fantastic competitions

Picture: SCOTT WRIGHT PHOTOGRAPHY

DURING the long weekend of April 22-25, Easter will be in bloom at the castle and children will be able take part in a gardening trail and collect letters from around the castle grounds to form a winning word.

The trail will lead to the bunny burrow near the spiralling yew maze where children completing the trail will collect a chocolate Easter egg prize.

Children's trail cards will also allow entrance into a craft marquee next to the maze where scarecrow and Easter craft activities will be on offer.

New for Easter 2011, Leeds Castle will also be giving children with a valid trail card free pumpkin seeds, pots and earth to grow them.

The Leeds Castle gardeners will be on hand to give tips and advice on how to grow enormous pumpkins as part of this year's competition. Beat the Leeds Castle Gardeners.

We have three family (two adults and three children) Spring into Easter Key to the Castle tickets to give away. To be in with a chance of winning just answer this simple question:

What seed will children with a valid trail card be given?

a) Pumpkin, b) Tomato, c) Cabbage

Text EASTER (space) answer, your name and address and send to 64343.

COME and watch one of the biggest events in history taking place on a big screen at Leeds Castle's Royal Wedding Celebration.

To commemorate the marriage of Prince William to Catherine Middleton on Friday, April 29, the event will be broadcast live on a big open air screen at Leeds Castle, perfect to watch history being made with your friends, family and those around you. Gates open early at 9.30am.

Leeds Castle is Kent's beautiful royal palace, having been home to six medieval queens during its 900 year history and a preferred residence of Henry VIII.

We have three family (two adults and three children) Royal Wedding Celebration Key to the Castle tickets to give away for the royal wedding screening. To be in with a chance of winning tell us:

How many medieval queens has Leeds Castle been home to?

A) 6, B) 8, C) 4

To enter text WEDDING (space) your answer, your name and your address and send to 64343.

AFTER the excitement of the royal wedding, Leeds Castle will be carrying the celebrations on into the evening with an open-air film screening of the musical comedy Mamma Mia! Following the film screening, there will be a magnificent fireworks display to music to conclude this memorable day.

We have three family (two adults and three children) Royal Wedding Fireworks and Open Air Cinema Evening Key to the Castle tickets to give away for just the film screening and fireworks.

To be in with a chance of winning just tell us:

a) Mamma Mia! b) Waterloo, c) Money Money Money

Text FIREWORKS (space) answer, your name and address and send to 64343.

If you're not one of the lucky winners, why not buy a Key to the Castle pass, which means you only have to pay once and your Key will get you admission to the castle and its grounds for a whole year, with the exception of evening ticketed events.

Charities lose out to clothing thieves

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

BOGUS charity collectors operating in Kent have caused a staggering drop in the number of donations from members of the public.

In just one month, children's charities Make a Wish and NSPCC have seen Clothes Aid donations drop significantly, with the biggest decreases seen in Medway, by 20 per cent, and Canterbury, by 42 per cent.

Karen England, head of fundraising at Make a Wish, which grants wishes to children suffering life-threatening illnesses, blames the decrease on the rising number of bogus collections, fake charity bags and clothing collection thefts.

"The money raised from clothing collections run for us by Clothes Aid is invaluable and donated clothes have generated over £620,000 nationally so far," she said.

"This year Clothes Aid aims to raise £150,000 for Make-A-Wish to help us grant more magical wishes to just some of the 20,000 children and young people living in the UK with a life-threatening illness.

"We absolutely depend on the public to donate their unwanted clothes.

"That's why we're calling on our supporters to keep on giving with care"

Common

Chatham and Aylesford Tory MP Tracey Crouch launched a campaign last year to stop bogus charity collectors operating in Kent and Medway.

It followed a BBC investigation which revealed Lithuanian common claiming to work for Breakthrough Breast Cancer had been delivering clothes sacks in north Kent.

The donated articles were then being sold on abroad.

According to Miss Crouch, an estimated 36,000 tonnes of clothes are stolen every year, at a cost to charities of up to £14 million in donations.

However, she said enforcement action against bogus charity collectors is poor and that only one in every 10,000 acts of illegal collection is actually punished.

"Unless the issue is taken seriously right from the top, the scam will continue," she said.

Tory charities minister Nick Hurd vowed to address the problem by writing to both the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Ministry of Justice to review guidance for officers and levels of punishment.

Make a Wish fundraising head Ms England issued advice to householders who wished to continue donating clothes to charity.

"Look out for the Clothes Aid collection bag on your doorstep between now and April 18 and check your clothing is picked up by a uniformed collector in a Clothes Aid van.

"Look for a Give with Confidence tick of approval from the Fundraising Standards Board on leaflets and bags."

If you suspect a bogus collector or a theft you can call the collection protection helpline on 020 7288 8535.

Mental health help all day

KENT and Medway will soon be among a handful of places in England to offer people free 24-hour confidential, emotional support.

From April 1, support from the Mental Health Matters will be available round the clock in Kent and Medway on 0800 107 0160.

Previously the helpline was open in the evenings and at weekends, but was closed in the daytime during the week.

"Last year, the Mental Health Matters helpline in Kent and Medway received more than 10,000 calls," said Lauretta Kavanagh, director of mental health commissioning for the Kent and Medway primary care trusts.

"People called about relationship problems, loneliness, stress, and bereavement."

People can also live chat with a counsellor at timeonline@mentalhealthmatters.co.uk.

Not too late for broadband bids

THERE is still time for Kent's rural communities to bid for grants to speed up broadband, says Cllr Kevin Lynes, of Kent County Council.

He said: "We recently launched the £1.5 million Superfast Broadband Pilot Fund to help rural communities benefit from high-speed broadband. The closing date for this is April 14.

"For those who are not successful first time round, we will have further KCC funds available in the summer and autumn to enable a total of 15 areas to benefit."

Communities in Kent can also bid for the separate KCC-administered community broadband grant.

Community groups can apply for grants on the www.kent.gov.uk/broadband website or an application form can be obtained from the KCC contact centre on 08458 247247.

ANGER: Feelings were running high on Saturday at the protest in London over Government spending cuts that will affect public sector services

Cuts too deep and too rapid, warns bishop

People 'need time to adjust to being self-supporting'

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

MASSIVE Government spending cuts will hamper the public's ability to regain responsibility from the state, warns the Bishop of Rochester.

While acknowledging the need to reduce the deficit, the Right Rev James Langstaff – who also represents Bexley, Bromley, Gravesham, Dartford and most of west Kent – says the speed and depth of the cuts may not give people time to adjust.

The bishop's comments come as more than 250,000 people took part in an anti-cuts demonstration in London, resulting in 201 arrests as a minority of protestors broke windows and covered businesses in paint.

"I think it's fairly clear that over the last generation we have – perhaps without noticing it – allowed the state to play a bigger and bigger part in people's lives, and that's partly our own fault," he said.

"When something goes wrong our response is 'what's the Government going to do about it?', and that has a price tag to it.

"So there needs to be more than just spending cuts; there needs to be a change in people's mentality so we learn again to take more responsibility for ourselves. But there's a slight danger that the learning process might be undermined by the depth and rapidity of the cuts."

Councils currently have little option but to make huge savings over the next financial year due to the front-loading of cuts imposed by the Coalition.

Kent County Council, for example, must save £95 million this year followed by a lower figure of £65m in 2012-13.

Last month the Archbishop of Canterbury,

CHANGE NEEDED: The Bishop of Rochester, the Rt Rev James Langstaff, urges caution

Dr Rowan Williams, told KoS Government spending cuts were putting vulnerable people at risk.

He added that he wished councils had the option to show more forward planning when it came to service reductions, and that he was worried some people would continue to be worse off, even after the economy has recovered.

The Rt Rev Langstaff, who is three months into his new job, agreed with Dr Williams that homelessness could also rise as a result of the spending cuts.

He said: "There's an argument for that. Even in wealthier parts of Kent there will be partners on good jobs who may be made redundant at the same time, and then even they will start to wonder where the next meal is going to come from."

"Of course the cuts will also cause a great deal of anxiety in areas that are heavily dependent on employment in the public sector or on state support for different things, and there's a big question mark over how we respond to that."

"But the Church will play its part in meeting human need, as it has done for more than 2,000 years – long before anyone invented the Big Society."

Pray for those in action in Libya

THE Bishop of Rochester has voiced his support for the ongoing military action against Colonel Gaddafi's Libyan regime.

While admitting Christians have difficulty supporting any kind of conflict, the Right Reverend James Langstaff indicated that coalition forces probably had to intervene for the greater good.

However, he warned against British forces getting caught up in yet another lengthy war, following the huge loss of life in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The Rt Rev Langstaff said: "There is a question as to what right we have to intervene when another person is perceived to be oppressive and violent towards his own people. It was the same with Hitler during World War Two.

"Christians have different views about using force, but I think in the case of Libya we probably had to, on balance.

"These things are never entirely clear. They're not clearly right or clearly wrong, and you often have to weigh up what to do.

"We don't know what carnage might have taken place if Col Gaddafi's forces had reached Benghazi. That's why we have to pray for the people whose job it is to make these extremely difficult judgements."

The Rt Rev Langstaff added that it was important the coalition forces do not outstay their welcome in Libya, and risk being perceived as "western colonialists".

He said: "My anxiety is that once you get involved in this type of thing, it can be very difficult to get out of.

"I really hope that those people who make these decisions work out how not to get embroiled."

SUPPORT: Allied air strikes were necessary in Libya, to prevent carnage, says the Bishop

HUMAN ERROR: The Japanese quake is a result of building in the wrong place, says the Bishop

Natural disasters 'a side-effect of creation'

CHRISTIANS should not lose faith in God over tragedies such as the devastating earthquake and tsunami in Japan, says the Bishop of Rochester.

The 9.0-magnitude quake and the powerful tidal wave it triggered off the north-east coast on March 11 is now known to have killed more than 10,900 people, with more than 17,000 still missing.

But while admitting it was understandable for people to question the existence of God following such catastrophic events, the Right Reverend James Langstaff said mankind had to take responsibility for what had happened.

"Tragedies like the earthquake shake people's confidence," he added. "They ask how they can believe in a loving God when such terrible things are allowed to happen, when the reality is that they arise out of the fabric of the world we live in.

"Creation has these side consequences. While one is very sympathetic about the situation in Japan, one has to consider where we choose to place our cities, because we can't expect God to do everything.

"We have it in our power to sort these problems out ourselves. Tokyo is very close to a major fault line, so what are we doing to exercise our God-given responsibilities to avoid these kinds of disasters?"

"Earthquakes are unfortunately going to happen. That's how the world was made."

FOLKESTONE - CALAIS

Mentally ill die 25 years early

By CHRIS MURPHY

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

LIFE expectancy among severely mentally ill patients in Kent is being dramatically reduced by up to 25 years due to poor physical health, according to a new study.

A head of nursing at a major health trust has admitted they had simply "forgotten" about physical well-being.

Researchers at the University of East Anglia chose the Kent and Medway National Health Service (NHS) and Social Care Partnership Trust, to carry out the study because it is a typical secondary mental health service provider to a population of 1.6 million in the South East of England.

The team said physical ill-health is already commonplace among severely mentally ill people across Britain.

Snapshot

So over two years, they chose to closely examine the cases of almost 800 Kent patients with severe mental illness such as schizophrenia and bipolar disorder in order to gain a snapshot of just how bad the situation really is, and, more importantly, what could be done about it.

In a frightening statistic, they discovered two-thirds were overweight or obese, and a disproportionate number suffered from diabetes, heart disease, high blood pressure and raised cholesterol.

The research team found inactivity, poor diet, smoking and excessive alcohol consumption were the norm, plus obesity was prevalent at 66 per cent.

It was also discovered 34 per cent of patients

Physical health 'forgotten', admits nursing boss

RESEARCH: Professor Richard Gray, right, believes more attention ought to be paid to the physical health of the mentally ill, many of whom are overweight and heavy smokers had high blood pressure; 52 per cent had abnormally high cholesterol levels and a surprisingly high proportion were being prescribed atypical antipsychotic drugs associated with weight gain.

This all contributed to a life expectancy slashed by an astonishing 25 years, mainly from cardiovascular disease.

The team said that while clinicians are well practised at assessing the risk of self-harm, they simply fail to assess the risk of cardiovascular disease.

Lead author Prof Richard Gray, of UEA's School of Nursing and Midwifery, said:

"Mental health nurses do a tough job and are compassionate and highly committed.

"But they do not tend to be skilled at managing the physical health of their patients and they often don't lead healthy lifestyles themselves.

"Since mental health workers tend to have sustained one-to-one relationships with their patients, those who smoke, have a poor diet and fail to take exercise are having a negative influence on the lives of vulnerable people.

"We need to train our mental health workers to lead by example and intervene if their patients' physical health is deteriorating."

Prof Gray has found that mental health workers tend to smoke more than the general population and nurses, making them less than effective role models.

Prof Gray added: "Health professionals have a duty to promote health in their patients.

"Government guidelines must reflect the shared responsibility of all health care professionals to promote health in one of the most marginalised groups in our society."

An initiative that could possibly dramatically improve the figures, a Wellbeing Support Programme was launched and more than 200 mental health nurses were trained in its use.

Monitoring

The results were encouraging, with 212 mental health practitioners trained and 782 patients enrolled, and in many cases their BMI was "significantly altered".

The report said: "The need to intervene to enhance the physical health of people with severe mental illness is beyond doubt.

"Maintaining patient engagement in a physical health improvement programme is challenging. Regular comprehensive physical health monitoring is necessary to establish the benefit of intervention and increase life expectancy and well-being in this population."

Donna Eldridge, head of nursing at the Kent and Medway National Health Service (NHS) and Social Care Partnership Trust, who took part in the study, admitted there had been problems, but they are working to improve.

She said: "The reason is the drugs we used to give them, and the fact that for some reason or another, therapy and everything else in mental health came to the forefront and we forgot about physical health."

MEDWAY: South dock pumping station

Protecting the relics of our industrial past

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

ENGLISH Heritage is undertaking a survey of historic industrial sites in Kent to see which are at risk of crumbling into a state of disrepair.

The former naval dockyards of Chatham and Sheerness are expected to be closely examined as part of the project, as are Oare Gunpowder Works near Faversham and various hop farms throughout the county.

English Heritage will publish its findings in October as part of its annual Heritage at Risk register, which provides an insight into the condition of the UK's listed buildings, scheduled monuments, protected wrecks and more.

South East planning director Dr Andy Brown said: "It's sometimes said that the South East does not have much of an industrial heritage."

"While it is true we don't have the huge textile mills, warehouses and potteries that characterise parts of the north, we do have innumerable remains in town and country of the Industrial Revolution – that great era spanning from 1750 to World War One when Britain led the world."

Either side of publication of the Heritage at Risk register, English Heritage will be engaging with politicians, academics, owners, developers and more to discuss how best to deal with the problem of decaying buildings.

Dr Brown said the current economic climate was not helping.

He added: "Owners are finding it hard to look after the needs of their buildings as well as their businesses. Developers are cautious about taking on vacant industrial buildings, and public bodies and regeneration agencies are less able to support schemes for re-use.

"There are no easy answers, but we're determined to see what can be done to help. Our industrial past is too important to ignore."

English Heritage is now inviting members of the public to post photographs and comments about their favourite industrial buildings at www.english-heritage.org.uk, which hosts a Flickr group run in association with the Council for British Archaeology, and the Association for Industrial Archaeology.

Last year's Heritage at Risk register revealed that 101 castles, monuments and other listed buildings in Kent face the very real possibility of falling apart due to a lack of investment.

But it was not all bad news for the county, as two previously at-risk structures – the Montreal Park Obelisk in Sevenoaks and the barn at Westenhanger Castle near Hythe – were removed from the register.

Also included was a sample survey of the 2,254 places of worship in the South East, which concluded that about 86 per cent were in either good or fair condition.

GROWTH INDUSTRY: Kent's historic hop farms will be surveyed by English Heritage

Church Post Office fit for Jane Austen

AN ISOLATED community with links to author Jane Austen is getting a post office in a church, writes Ian Read.

Goodnestone, near Canterbury has been without a post office and general store for three months.

The nearest shops are in Wingham or Aylesham and there is only a limited bus service, so the Church of England decided to step in to help.

Surveys have shown villages decay when its centre loses a major asset like the village store.

But, starting this week, a counter has been set up in Holy Cross Church on Monday and Wednesday mornings.

Jane Austen is believed to have worshipped there when her brother lived at nearby Goodnestone Park, where she was a frequent visitor. However, she would barely recognise the 14th century church now as Victorian architects 'improved' it.

The Bishop of Dover, the Rt Rev Trevor Willmott blessed the new venture which was officially opened by the High Sheriff of Kent, Peregrine Massey, watched by children from the primary school next door.

The church's vicar, Rev Nigel Hale realised there was a gap in the community which the church could help to fill.

He said: "Local people were bereft when the post office and the village shop closed just before Christmas."

"The church community quickly identified Holy Cross Church could provide a venue for the post office and we have worked to make this happen."

"By opening up Holy Cross for alternative uses we are placing the church at the centre of the community and providing a benefit to the people."

Mr Hale says it is hoped to organise a mini farmers' market and coffee mornings at the same time.

Jane Austen expert Maggie Lane believes the author would have heartily approved of the project.

Ms Lane, who has written three books on the author, said: "Jane Austen was a great letter writer who cherished keeping in touch with her family."

"When she stayed with her brother at Goodnestone Park Jane wrote many letters and I think if she were alive she would have loved using a post office situated so conveniently in the village."

VOLUNTEER: No experience is necessary to sign up become a heritage tree surveyor

By CHRIS MURPHY

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A GROUP looking after the county's heritage trees is calling for volunteers to check on our ancient woodlands and ensure they are in good health.

The British Trust for Conservation Volunteers was last year awarded a £652,400 Heritage Lottery Fund grant. Now it is using the cash to run a five-year scheme to encourage the involvement of hundreds of people of all ages to look after Kent's rich stock of heritage trees.

These are defined by the Forestry Commission as "old trees, wide trees, rare trees and trees with historical and cultural significance".

The Ashford branch of the organisation, which was launched in 1959, wants volunteers to become tree surveyors, take part in educational sessions, plant new trees, or learn more on free courses.

A spokesman said: "Just a few hours of your time could help to conserve these magnificent trees."

"BTCV is looking for 330 volunteers to register and train to become heritage tree surveyors – no experience is necessary as BTCV will provide all registered volunteers with free training and equipment."

It is holding three open days: on May 14 in Ashford, June 14 at Canterbury, and July 10 in Tonbridge, to give people the chance to hear more.

Project officer Virginia Hodge said: "We will be running these events to get people involved with tree recording and raising the profile of heritage trees."

"The event will include guided walks and talks, visits to heritage tree parks, community awareness open days, biodiversity and heritage tree ecology courses and heritage tree walks."

She said the sessions will provide an introduction to practical conservation and the natural world with fun activities including natural art and music, tree decorating and mini-beast hunts.

She added: "Heritage trees are an amazing and integral part of our natural heritage. They are the old trees in woodland, parkland and the gnarled oaks in the hedgerows.

"Kent has 10 per cent of England's irreplaceable ancient woodland. We want to identify and record the oldest examples and save and protect them for future generations."

Kate MacKenzie, BTCV operations director, added: "South East England has the highest proportion of heritage trees in Western Europe, offering biodiversity, providing habitats and food for a range of creatures and representing hundreds of years of Kentish culture, yet we know little about them."

"Now we will be able to properly identify, protect and manage these important natural assets."

• Call Virginia Hodge on 01233 666519 or email v.hodge@btcv.org.uk for more information.

Make a date with nature at the castle

THE RSPB needs help from people across the county for a wildlife project at Leeds Castle.

From next Saturday, April 9, until Monday, May 2, and again from August 13-September 4, the group is running its Date With Nature event at the castle near Maidstone.

It wants to encourage visitors to find out more about the wide range of birds and other wildlife that can be seen in the grounds and to help them get a close up view.

Birds likely to be seen include three types of swans, the black, whooper and mute, plus geese, ducks, herons, buzzards, spar-rowhawks, kingfishers and even water voles. James McComiskey, of the RSPB South East said: "If you're enthusiastic about wildlife and like talking to people, you're bound to enjoy this project.

"You'll be given training, so you don't need to have expert knowledge on wildlife to volunteer with us."

The charity needs people of all ages and backgrounds and the volunteers will distribute information to visitors and assist people with viewing the wildlife from the castle grounds using an array of optical equipment including binoculars and spotting-scopes.

Anyone interested in volunteering can contact James McComiskey on 07889615725 or email james.mccomiskey@rspb.org.uk as soon as possible to arrange training and volunteer schedules.

MP's disgust at taunts on killer thug's facebook profile

By IAN READ

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

JULIAN Brazier MP says he is "extremely disappointed" a killer will not be punished after updates on online social networking site Facebook appeared to be taunting his victim's family.

Curtis Delima, 22, was jailed for life last year for his part in the murder of Whitstable father-of-three Mark Witherall.

The 47-year-old was attacked by thugs at his home in King Edward Street.

Delima smashed him in the face with a spirit-level before the rest of the gang punched and kicked him. Mr Witherall never regained consciousness.

He was trying to stop Delima and his gang stealing tools and computer equipment from his house, the court heard. They fell on him like a "pack of hyenas", the judge said.

But last month Delima's Facebook page reportedly said the killing had been "fun" - a claim which left Mr Witherall's widow Michelle "dumbfounded".

However, efforts to take action against Delima have ground to a halt after the Prison Service said it was unable to confirm the killer had posted the update.

VICTIM: Mark Witherall was beaten up

Officers say a third party is using Delima's page to cause trouble but Mr Brazier, the Conservative MP for Canterbury and Whitstable, believes the murderer is behind the abuse.

Prisons Minister Crispin Blunt wrote in a letter to the MP: "I would like to assure you there is no evidence suggesting Mr Delima has accessed his Facebook profile himself."

"There are indications a third party was responsible for the updates."

DISAPPOINTED: Tory MP Julian Brazier

It has prompted Mr Brazier to call for tougher regulations for the likes of Facebook and internet providers to be able to pinpoint where updates to the site are made from to prevent any repeat.

Mr Brazier said: "I'm extremely disappointed that the Prison Service cannot pin down who was responsible for posting such a disgusting message."

"It seems Curtis Delima was in touch with the offending party. To cause further misery

KILLER: Curtis Delima was jailed for life to the family of Mr Witherall, even if it is through a third party, shows no remorse.

"This is one example why we need tighter legal arrangements for internet service providers so that those abusing the system can be traced."

The MP said he would be pressing for new restrictions to be put in place.

Greens and driving association approach roads debate from opposite directions

REVIEW: The speed limit is under scrutiny and could be raised to 80mph on most UK motorways, but campaigners want reductions

M-way speed limit review fuels safety and pollution fears

GREEN campaigners have vowed to push for reduced motorway speed limits despite transport chiefs in Parliament considering a possible rise by the summer.

MPs could be asked to vote as soon as July on plans to raise the limit from 70 to 80mph as part of a new road safety strategy, due to be considered in May.

Transport minister Mike Penning said they will look at the economic benefits of shorter journey times and the road safety implications.

Supporters of the proposed increase said when the 70mph limit was introduced in 1964 cars were not capable of reaching higher speeds. They argue that with advances in technology, vehicles are now designed to travel safely at faster speeds.

But Kent Green Party said there was ample evidence that safety decreased and emissions increased with higher speeds.

Member Steve Dawe said: "If we lower motorway speeds and speeds

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

in residential areas, we can cut both emissions and accidents. Kent Green Party supports a review of motorway speeds with a view to reducing limits and has long campaigned for 20mph limits for all residential roads in urban areas."

An experimental 70mph limit was put in place almost 50 years ago after a spate of unofficial road races and accidents on what was then unrestricted road.

The new limit could be put in place on motorways across the country, although plans are to keep a 70mph limit on the M25.

Statistics show British motorways are among the safest roads in Europe. In 2009 there were 2,222 road deaths, with 132 of those on motorways.

Kent Green Party has also repeated calls for 20mph limits in residential areas, prompted by a rise in the number of child casualties on the roads.

Chairman Stuart Jeffrey said: "This problem has gone on far too long. It's time for action. Kent needs an immediate change to 20mph limits in all residential areas. As we know, residents overwhelmingly support this, the last government supported this and public health experts support this.

"There is no excuse not to implement it."

Campaign group the Association of British Drivers (ABD) has been pushing for an increase in the motorway speed limit for years.

Kent spokesman Ian Taylor said an increase would be a victory for drivers.

"Motorways are the fastest and yet safest roads. Most people drive on motorways and a lot of them drive at 80mph anyway," he said.

"Driving at this speed is what most modern cars are built for."

A spokesman for the Highways Agency, which forms part of the Department for Transport, said the plans formed part of a new road safety strategy which will be considered next month.

Beating the burglars

POLICE in Maidstone have recovered stolen property worth almost £80,000 in the first few days of a campaign targeting burglars.

Heavy machinery which had been stolen from the Medway City Estate on March 20 was recovered while a search warrant was carried out at a property in Otham. Det Sgt Martin Foord said no arrests had been made but investigations were continuing.

"Recovering such a large amount of high-value machinery just days after it had been stolen was a really positive start to the campaign," he said.

Stay Safe This Spring is Kent Police's seasonal drive to reduce crime associated with lighter evenings and mild weather. It runs until April 8 and aims to raise awareness of how opportunist crimes can be prevented.

Officers are targeting those suspected of burglary, theft and handling stolen goods, and the outlets used for passing on stolen property.

Chief Insp Lee Russell said: "Opportunist thieves will look for homes where occupants have gone out and left windows open. Taking a few simple steps now can keep you and your property safe this spring."

Home security advice includes closing and locking front doors and windows if you are in the back garden; don't leave keys, handbags or valuables visible through a window; and consider extra security measures such as spy holes, door chains, door locks and alarms.

LETTER OF THE WEEK

You can bank on more anger

As one of the huge number of people who attended the TUC's March for the Alternative, which included many from across Kent, I can say that despite the small amount of so-called violence against certain establishments, the majority peacefully paraded their total opposition to the Con-Dem Coalition Government's plans.

However, if some people are worried about the Ritz being cracked, or a few bejewelled Hyacinth Bucket types being upset by the moralising chanting of UK Uncut's flashmob-style invasion of Fortnum & Mason and the breaking of banks' windows, maybe they should actually be asking themselves why people felt so angry in the first place.

The reasons for the anger are the same as why up to half a million people were peacefully parading through the streets of London in the first place. They were all against the unnecessary cuts, job losses and complete privatisation of the public sector being carried out by the Government.

I watched people from across the UK pass with banners from not just the unions and political parties, but from many youth, health, care and elderly centres, council departments, NHS nurses and doctors, social services, disability groups, and even off-duty police officers, among many others.

As TUC chief Brendan Barber said before Saturday, it's not just the unions but a very broad coalition of ordinary people and groups.

Here was also the anger Bank of England Governor Mervyn King mentioned recently – wondering why there seemed so little of it. Even he has intimated that cuts to the state sector – affecting the most vulnerable – because of the mistakes of the financial sector, are largely unjustified.

All those in London last Saturday were clear that there is most definitely an alternative – that the Green New Deal, Robin Hood Tax, closing tax loopholes and maintaining the NHS and welfare state is a far better way to a decent society than the money-mad Con-Dems can ever imagine. Well done to everyone who was there and all those who watched in support from home.

Dunkirk spirit alive and well

So Mrs Russell from Ramsgate thinks the British wouldn't behave like the Japanese in an emergency (Letters, last week).

Has she forgotten so soon the incredible tales of bravery during the 7/7 bombings in London, when heroic people saved many lives at great risk to themselves?

What about during the flooding in Cumbria, when neighbours helped each other? What about when there were IRA bombs going off and people rushed to help their fellow men and women? During the Boxing Day tsunami many British holidaymakers and those living in

OPINION: A NUCLEAR NIPPON AGAIN

TIM GARBUTT asks if the crisis in Japan offers lessons closer to home and whether the nuclear industry's toxic tide has finally reached its high point

IT'S ALMOST impossible to describe the events in Japan. A house on fire and floating down-river. A cargo ship flung into the centre of town. And whole towns simply washed away.

And if the effects of the tsunami and earthquake – the worst in Japan's history – are receding, then the explosions at the Fukushima nuclear power complex pose more problems. These apocalyptic events also contain the seeds of danger in Kent. The Boxing Day tsunami in 2004 left more than 250,000 dead around the Indian Ocean; the broken flood defences in New Orleans from 2005's Hurricane Katrina; and the destruction of Port-au-Prince in Haiti last year were equally appalling and are now part of our Age of Climate Change.

Earthquakes, tsunamis and floods are nothing new, but warmer summers and colder winters mean more frequent and violent weather events. In Kent, we now have to wonder about the safety of nuclear reactors at Dungeness and even Sizewell – built on the shoreline and still without a no-fly zone, as required at Fukushima.

Or even the dangers of the USS Richard Montgomery, sunk off Sheerness in 1944 with 3,000 tonnes of explosives on board. An explosion could unleash a five-metre-high tsunami on Kent.

And with France one of the few major nuclear powers outside the United States and Japan, the dangers of the 2009 failures at Gravelines, just over the Channel, and dumping nuclear waste off Brittany seems ludicrous in the 21st century.

Especially as Fukushima now requires food and drink to be screened for radiation before export from Japan – a concern for Kent's farmers facing problems here. Nuclear power is still expanding in China with five reactors due to be built each year, but as an energy source it must now have reached its high tide. All the more poignant given the 25th anniversary of Chernobyl this month and the horror of a third nuclear disaster on Japan.

Nuclear's toxic dangers are too high and reliance on fossil fuels such as uranium an anachronism, compared with the relatively low production cost and perpetual, clean and free energy from renewables such as solar, wave and wind. Kent's windfarms in the London Array or Vattenfall sites will certainly be out-produced by solar and projects such as Desertec in the years ahead, where all the world's electricity can be generated by just six hours of sunshine in Saharan solar farms.

If Freedom of Information and Environmental Information Regulations provide the right to information on public organisations, utilities and the environment, then surely public safety issues for toxins, flood defences, air and water pollution, asbestos, etc, must routinely be published and scrutinised.

Still in 2011, six years after the FoI Act became law (and EIR some 20 years earlier across the EU) Kent's politicians and civil servants are dragging their heels on basic issues such as costs and diaries.

Fukushima and the two earthquakes in New Zealand in the last year highlight how search and rescue teams can still be at base four days after an emergency response.

Surely the time is right for permanent UN humanitarian depots across the Pacific and Caribbean for a response within 12 hours of any crisis. Decommissioned aircraft carriers could be available for the hurricane season with food, water, tents and medicine. It seems astonishing there is no single global emergency response number – similar to 999 in the UK or 112 in the EU – as well as a single web and text helpline.

In Kent, we seem able to fund 76 lawyers on the rates at the county council or £20 million of investments in Japan Tobacco, yet struggle with a dedicated air ambulance and even a single non-emergency number to lead the way across the world in the hour of need.

At the very least, when the flood defences fail and the reactors explode, you might get through to the right call centre in Kent rather than put on hold.

• Tim Garbutt is managing director of the Sincerity Agency, based in east Kent. He is standing as an Independent Green mayor for Ramsgate.

affected areas helped people escape and cope with the aftermath.

There are many instances of ordinary people doing extraordinary things in times of emergency in recent times.

It's a great pity Mrs Russell thinks so little of her fellow Britons to assume there would be looting or indifference in a disaster.

Has she forgotten what we call the Dunkirk spirit, when we all rally round to help those less fortunate?

Howard Johnston, by email

Water power is neglected

We have a large wind farm operating off the Thanet coast. Islay has now installed a tidal turbine that will fulfil all the energy requirements of the island, including running eight distilleries.

It would be interesting to compare the efficiency and output of both. Wind is intermittent; tides are constant, as is the flow of water in rivers. Why, then, has so much Government energy and money been ploughed into the less-reliable wind turbines?

There are other advantages to water turbines. Because they are underwater, there is no visual or sonic impact.

They could pass the electricity directly into the mains in the same way domestic energy producers are supposed to do.

The wind farms are, I believe, built by foreign companies, and the cost of installation is formidable. The ease and cost of installing water turbines would be far less.

Moreover, there are several British companies already producing them. There must be hundreds of rivers and streams in this country with sufficient flow of water to drive them – if a stream can power a watermill, it can drive a turbine. There are loads of ex-watermills on the most unpromising little rivers.

With some Government investment, this could become a thriving industry, and would surely find favour with environmentalists.

Or is there some insurmountable drawback to water power?

Dave Stewart, Deal

Railing against travel expense

As more and more people unfortunately find themselves unemployed and their savings being diminished, getting back to work can be seriously hampered by increased travel costs.

There are astronomically high rail fares, rapidly increasing fuel prices and an expensive and woefully inadequate bus service.

Most people will find they are going to travel a long way if they want work. This will probably involve commuting to London if they are lucky, or further afield.

The cost of a monthly season ticket by rail is up to £475. How many unemployed people can afford that?

And they will not get any help from the Job Centre unless they have been out of work for at least six months.

Sittingbourne and Sheppey MP Gordon Henderson has Just how thin the blue line really is

A COMMON complaint among victims of crime is that there are no longer enough bobbies on the beat to deter offenders.

But even the most supportive of residents will be shocked to hear that fewer than 10 per cent of Kent Police officers are out patrolling at any one time.

Even figures for areas with higher numbers of frontline police have shockingly low numbers, with Merseyside – the place with the largest count – having only 17 per cent of its force out on patrol.

People understand there are spending cuts and forces have to look carefully at how things are run, but having just 10 per cent on the beat will come as a nasty surprise to most. And what kind of message does it send to criminals? They must be rubbing their hands.

If there is more visible policing on the streets, the public are likely to feel reassured and perhaps those planning to break the law will think twice. Even problems such as anti-social behaviour, which can blight communities, can be stemmed if there is a local beat officer deterring troublemakers.

The Chief Constable defended the figure, saying although visibility was important there were other elements of crime fighting which could not be done openly, and that work of other uniformed officers had not been taken into account.

Although this work is appreciated by the community, it does not stop anti-social behaviour and other problems faced by residents which could be sorted out swiftly by an officer pounding the pavement.

Treat your mother to a perfect day

THIS Sunday, treat your mum by sitting her down, pouring her a glass of wine and letting her put her feet up without interruption.

While for many this is a typical Sunday afternoon, for most mothers it's a faded memory of days gone by.

So this Mother's Day treat your mum to some long-awaited rest and relaxation.

raised this in Parliament.

Before taking a job, the prospective employee has to consider the expense of getting to work and other costs.

If this person pays rent, and council tax – paid for while out of work – these costs have to first to be subtracted from pay, then it is likely this person will then be liable to pay tax.

The monthly figures could be: rent £500; council tax £100; rail fares £475; making a total £1,075. This means the employee has to earn £1,210 a month before they can eat or heat their property. That equates to £14,500 a year.

How many jobs in London pay significantly more than that, for people who have been out of work?

Nationalisation of the railways, as per Official Monster Raving Loony policy, would mean fares could be reduced, so helping people get back into work.

Vespa rides again

For nearly 30 years I've been collecting Vespa motor-scooters and associated memorabilia.

Needless to say, the little Vespa was a huge part of life in the 1950s and '60s when the majority of such vehicles were made.

My modest collection has been a regular feature at classic vehicle shows up and down the country, however, I am shortly to open a 1950s-style café which is to incorporate a Vespa/scooter theme, with badges, banners, pennants, etc, lining the walls.

I am particularly interested in unearthing more Vespa Club of Britain 'cog' badges (approximately 3.5 inches in the shape of a gear cog) which were issued to branch members locally, and to commemorate rallies and meetings.

If any of your readers have such treasures gathering dust, and would be interested in seeing them appreciated by a wider audience, and/or have photos/stories that they wish to share, could they contact me on 07780 136894 (I will be happy to call back), or by email at scooter_cafe_kent@yahoo.co.uk or c/o 226, Woolwich Road, Charlton, SE7 7QU.

Additionally, anyone wishing to keep abreast of progress regarding the opening of the café, feel free to drop me a line. Many thanks.

Propping up the EU

Having listened to the Budget and considered the future outlook, could there ever be a better time to get out of Europe?

Here we are with a country on its knees and we are borrowing billions to prop up Europe, lend money to Ireland and give it away to various countries where it just disappears.

David Cameron, just like Tony Blair, has taken us into another conflict that seems to have no end and costing billions.

The people of this country, from top to bottom, are paying for things nobody wants and it is time for Cameron to give the people a say in the future of his own country instead of risking the lives of our depleted forces so other people can have a say in theirs.

He knows he has no chance of convincing people that it is better to stay in Europe and no right to deny us the referendum that most want.

Start being a bit honest with your own people Mr Cameron, and keep those promises that got you elected. You can also stop using Nick Clegg as a reason for breaking them.

If the people wanted a Lib Dem government, they'd have voted one in.

Cheer on the team

WellChild, the national charity for sick children, is calling for volunteers to come along and support our dedicated runners in the Virgin London Marathon on Sunday, April 17, at various points around the capital.

Our team of over 150 runners face the gruelling task of taking on 26.2 miles to raise as much as possible to help sick children across the UK. Why not come along and join our renowned pink and purple supporting team in making as much noise as possible cheering them on through the blood, sweat and tears and help show them how much we appreciate their hard work.

If you'd like to be part of such a positive and eventful day – without donning your trainers in support – then we'd love to meet you and invite you to be one of WellChild's team in helping provide a boost to the runners' efforts along the way.

The fun (and it is a lot of fun) begins at approximately 8am and we need your enthusiasm until roughly 6pm. T-shirts, cheer sticks and other merchandise will be provided, as well as ponchos should they be needed. If you are interested, complete our online application form www.wellchild.org.uk.

If you have any inquiries, email me on volunteer@wellchild.org.uk or call 0845 458 8171. We hope you can come along and are looking forward to what will undoubtedly be an inspiring day for all.

Frankenstein meat

A Frankenfarm future edges closer to reality. After factory farming – and the British dairy industry's recent push towards mega-dairies – comes news from the EU that meat and milk from cloned animals will soon be flooding our supermarkets.

And here's the kick, even if we did want to avoid it we won't be able to as it won't be labelled as such.

While some may dismiss this as EU madness, the surprising news is that Caroline Spelman, the Conservative food and farming secretary, led the call to abandon moves to regulate or allow the public to identify milk or meat from clones or their descendants.

So much for consumer choice. Currently, the Food Standards Agency had declared the practice illegal. This will now change, and as there are already over 100 cloned offspring on British farms, milk and meat from them is likely to be on sale here within months.

This is not scaremongering. Very real animal welfare implications have been identified, as cloning can lead a large number of miscarriages, deformed organs and even gigantism. It has the potential to cause suffering and distress in animals that are already worked beyond their natural capacities. This "playing God" could even have unforeseen implications for human health.

The list of reasons to avoid animal products gets longer. From preventing suffering, to improving your health, to protecting the planet – we can now add avoiding products from cloned animals. Felicity's tea party

I am appealing to all animal lovers to join me in supporting the Blue Cross Tea Party, a nationwide fundraising event for animals in need.

Every year, this wonderful charity takes in thousands of unwanted and abandoned pets and horses and gives them a second chance in loving new homes. And its hospitals care for sick and injured animals which would otherwise go untreated.

But they rely on donations from the public to provide this care. You can help by taking part in the Blue Cross Tea Party. Why not hold a tea party for family, friends or work colleagues and ask for donations for Blue Cross?

It's a great excuse to get baking and rustle up some cakes or biscuits for a worthy cause.

All funds raised will help the Blue Cross care for animals with nowhere else to turn, and every penny really does count. So go on, put the kettle on and sign up now at bluecrossteaparty.org.uk, or phone 08444 993 663.

A siege mentality

As a result of forensic archaeology, we are learning more about the murder of Archbishop Sudbury (Recreating face of murdered bishop, March 27).

He was killed during the Peasants' Revolt because of the high taxes he imposed as Lord Chancellor. Another Archbishop of Canterbury died because of burdensome financial impositions on the people.

St Alphege was captured, along with the Bishop of Rochester, after the siege of Canterbury by the Danes 1,000 years ago. Because he refused to let people pay a huge ransom for his release, the Danes pelted Alphege to death with ox bones on April 19, 1012.

The Church is planning to remember the millennium of St Alphege's martyrdom. But this year is the millennium of the siege of Canterbury, which ended in frightful destruction. We know the exact dates. The siege started on September 8, 1011, and ended with the sack of the city on September 29.

When I have made inquiries, I have found little civic awareness in Kent and Canterbury about the dreadful siege.

But such sufferings of our ancestors should be remembered for ever. It is getting very late to organise events, but there ought to be some official remembrance of the siege of Canterbury.

Frederic Stansfield, Canterbury

Green and so naïve

How kind of Steve Dawe of Kent Green Party to agree with me regarding overpopulation (Letters, last week).

Usually the environmentalists are so high up on their horses they are unable to hear any evidence or facts from mere mortals.

Whatever scientific evidence you can quote, cold, hard logic and common sense dictate that wind turbines, solar panels, battery cars, etc, are just plasters to cover a very large wound, especially on an island constituting less than 0.2 per cent of the world's land mass.

Getting on for three billion people in India and China alone aspire to Western lifestyles, which means millions more cars, more consumption of oil and finite resources, more pollution, etc.

You can save your plastic bags, turn down your heating, use your car less and do all the other things that are supposed to save our planet, but if nothing is done about overpopulation and corporate and government greed, expecting year-on-year growth as the Earth's resources dwindle, you might as well spit in the sea to try to make it deeper.

Unfortunately, profligate governments who try to bribe us with our own money, have a vested interest in an increasing population to pay for their lack of financial acumen.

Save the planet? There's no possible chance of success, just a fools' paradise.

Before readers place a bet on the Grand National, please take a moment to consider what your money may be funding.

Between 2000 and 2010, 31 horses died at the annual three-day meeting at Aintree.

In 2010 alone, five horses were killed – a fact that went largely unreported amid the hype surrounding this event.

The punishing Grand National is Britain's longest horse race – covering a distance of four miles and 856 yards. The horses are required to jump 30 formidable obstacles, some of which include perilous drops, ditches and sharp turns. Forty horses take part – an

From Don's off-kilter life to Dan's stand-up

Cult TV star Clark's Gulbenkian date

DAN Clark is the star of cult BBC3 comedy How Not To Live Your Life, a show centred on Don Danbury, a neurotic young man with no friends who lives in a large house left to him by his grandmother.

It follows Don's unsuccessful attempts to get many of the basics of life sorted. His efforts at work, friendship and love are all hindered by an overactive imagination which shows him all the things that could go wrong.

Clark admits Don is an idiot, but a lot of his actions are inspired by his own character.

He said: "My friends would say I'm more like him than I would care to admit, but there is one huge difference between me and Don: he has no self-awareness whatsoever.

"I'm a lot more concerned about what people think of me. When I am writing Don, it doesn't take much for me to know what he would do. He is all my worst characteristics in one."

The show is quirky, with a strange set of personalities surrounding the main character.

These include Eddie, a carer who continues to look after Don after his grandmother dies; elderly foul-mouthed neighbour Mrs Treacher; and his female housemates, who Don fruitlessly pursues.

Clark says that when he first developed the show he wanted to get away from the naturalistic comedy that had been a success in such shows as The Office.

"I wanted to create something that was heightened. Not cartoonish or totally surreal, but a bit off-kilter with unusual characters.

"Eddie was important because we wanted Don to be a loner with no friends but needed him to have a confidant. So we created this super-nice person who was actually a bit creepy because he is so nice," he said.

There have been three series of the show, which has steadily developed a strong fan base after a low-key start.

Clark is hoping more will be commissioned by the BBC but continues to work on other TV projects. In the meantime, fans can get a chance to see him live when he brings his show to Canterbury this month.

The 34-year-old is looking forward to performing in front of an audience again.

He said: "Making TV is rewarding and fun. I quite enjoy getting into the production side of things, but it's more like having a job, doing things by committee that take a long time.

"Sometimes it's hard to remember – when you wrote something five months ago – why it was funny. Doing stand-up, you get an immediate response and a real buzz."

Clark is no stranger to live comedy, having performed sketch shows and stand-up from his early 20s. One of his topics for this tour is modern communication.

He said: "I talk about this sort of bubble that I have created for myself. I communicate with almost everyone through Facebook or Twitter. When I actually have to talk to someone on a phone I almost have a panic attack.

"Texting was great at first because you could communicate with people you didn't actually

ON THE RISE:

AT EASE: Clark is relaxed about the slowburn of his cult TV show want to talk to, but then I started doing it with the people I liked as well. I seem to have lots of friends online, but it doesn't make my actual social skills in real life any better."

As well as stand-up, Clark will be performing songs with Ben Parker, who works on the music for the television series.

He said: "I always liked comedy songs but just felt people weren't doing them well. But in the last couple of years people like Tim Minchin and Flight of the Concorde have come along. They've made them less cringeworthy. They're funny, but they're also really good songs in themselves.

"I used to do a monthly night in London when I would have a section where I would play some music. When I was putting this show together, I realised I had all this material, so I decided to perform the songs for the first time on tour. It gives the show a different flavour for the second half."

Clark, who has also appeared on many comedy shows down the years including Only Fools and Horses and The Mighty Boosh, is keen to continue writing his own material.

He said: "You have to keep the plates spinning. If for some reason we decide not to do more How Not To Live, I want to know I can soon move on to the next project.

"Obviously I would like a big hit on BBC1, but How Not To Live Your Life has allowed me to develop in a less pressured environment.

"The first series wasn't that well known about, then with the second people started to notice, and we did even better by the third series. I haven't had that scrutiny from people saying 'What is he going to do next?'. I don't feel huge pressure with the next TV show."

Television also helps raise a performer's profile, leading to a new experience for the comedian.

"The last time I toured, people would come and see me, but they didn't know who I was so you'd have to spend the first five minutes winning them over," said Clark.

"Now I walk onstage and 80 per cent of the audience know me from the TV show. It's such a good feeling when you walk out and know they are already excited to see you."

• Dan Clark is appearing at The Gulbenkian, Canterbury, on Tuesday, April 12, from 7.45pm. Tickets cost £15. Visit www.kent.ac.uk/gulbenkian for more information.

Meet robotic film stars

FANS of science fiction will get a chance to see some of its most interesting creations in an exhibition of robots at Chatham Historic Dockyard.

The event includes a collection of robots, cyborgs and androids and includes many props and costumes from film and promotional material.

The metal stars of the big screen on show include Robby the Robot from the Hollywood movie Forbidden Planet.

Film fans will also recognise a vintage Robocop and a B9 robot torso made by Andy Shaw, the original Dalek builder.

Fem-bots are represented with the beautiful Grace exposed in all her glory and Sonny, who starred alongside Will Smith in the film I, Robot. There will also be domestic robots such as those shown on Tomorrow's World.

During the half-term holidays and bank-holiday weekend, Riveting Robots workshops will also be part of the exhibition. Children can enjoy making robots and win robot-themed party games and a giant robot sculpture. There will also be a chance to use radio-controlled robots.

Robot - A Collection Of Robots, Cyborgs And Androids starts on Monday, April 4, and runs until Friday, June 17.

Riveting Robot workshops are all included in the normal admission price to The Historic Dockyard. For more details and prices, visit www.thedockyard.co.uk/steamandtransport.

Live and local

MUSIC promoter WhitLive is adding support slots to its concerts at the East Quay in Whitstable.

The move is to give local bands a chance to entertain crowds at the venue.

On Saturday, April 30, Whitstable band Natural Selection will be supporting the Blockheads. The band are described as a cross between funk, blues hip-hop and jazz.

Then on Friday, May 20, punk flamenco band Tener Duende, above, will support Adrian Edmondson and the Bad Shepherds.

WhitLive director Jane Lindsey said: "I am so pleased that we have been able to add the local-band support slot. There is such a wealth of fantastic musicians and bands in Whitstable and in Kent and we are honoured to be able to see some of them at our gigs."

For more on events promoted by WhitLive, email Jane Lindsey on jane@whitlive.co.uk or visit www.whitlive.co.uk.

Share spring beauty with your Mum

HOLE Park Gardens at Rolvenden makes the perfect destination for Mother's Day this spring as the 15-acre gardens blossom into swathes of tulips, magnolias and azaleas.

Carpets of bluebells and wild-meadow flowers provide contrast with ornamental topiary and wide lawns. The natural gardens feature rhododendrons, primulas and heathers. The garden is surrounded by parkland and boasts views across the Weald. Fountains, a walled rose garden and wrought-iron gates complete the scene.

After enjoying the gardens, guests can visit the tea rooms, which offer light lunches and homemade cakes. Take home produce in the form of jam and honey made from the fruit and bees on the estate.

Ales brewed at the Old Dairy Brewery will be on sale, as will plants and flowers.

Visitors can experience the spring spectacular every day until May 31, during which time the gardens are open from 11am to 6pm. Admission is £6 for adults and £1 for children. Season tickets are available.

You can be fit as a fiddle in free class

IT seems the recent revival of TV dance programmes has had a knock-on effect on the wider population.

Free dance lessons for anyone over 50 are available at the Stour Centre, Ashford, as part of Age UK's Fit As A Fiddle scheme.

The classes will cover a range of styles from the 17th century to the present day and are aimed at beginners.

John Sweeney of Contrafusion, who will teach the classes with his partner Karen, said: "Lots of people watch dancing on TV and decide they'd like to try it but find it too hard."

"We teach partner dances, but you don't have to bring a partner as the idea is to change partners for every dance – it's much more sociable and great fun."

The couple, who have danced all over the world since their teenage years, ensure the steps can be followed by walking them through and 'calling' each move.

Sweeney said: "Dancing has given us incredible pleasure throughout our lives and we want to bring that same joy to lots more people through these great social dances."

Classes will run from 2pm to 3.30pm on Thursdays until May 26. For more information, visit www.contrafusion.co.uk.

Dancer comes back to her roots during national tour

A TOP ballet student from Sevenoaks will return to Kent to perform with the Ballet Central UK tour.

Nicole Craddock, who is training to become a professional dancer at London Central School of Ballet, will be graduating this summer.

This will be her first experience of being on tour, which is seen as the best way for students to get a taste of life in a professional touring company.

Ballet Central will visit two venues in Kent this spring as part of its 2011 UK-wide tour, appearing at the EM Forster Theatre at Tonbridge School on Friday, April 8, and then at The Gulbenkian theatre in Canterbury on Thursday, April 28.

This year will be this unique student ballet company's 26th tour, with visits to 20 venues across the UK, including the Royal Opera House.

Audiences will see classical and neo-classical ballet, dynamic contemporary dance, jazz works, narrative pieces and even street dance.

Musical director Philip Feeney will provide live accompaniment.

School director Sara Matthews said: "We are the only vocational ballet school to offer an honours degree and pre-professional touring on such a scale.

"Ballet Central continues to be a springboard for hundreds of dancers into some of the top international dance companies."

To book tickets for the Tonbridge performance, at the EM Forster Theatre, phone 01732 304241 or alternatively visit www.emftheatre.com.

To book tickets for the Canterbury performance, you can phone 01227 769075 or visit www.thegulbenkian.co.uk.

A bright star of jazz music

BRITISH jazz award-winner Stacey Kent is bringing her music to Canterbury.

A native of New Jersey, Kent developed a childhood fascination for musical comedies and the great jazz masters as well as folk-singers such as Neil Young.

With the release of her first solo album, Close Your Eyes, in 1997, the critics saluted the birth of a new jazz star. She has impeccable phrasing, a clear voice and a singular style that blends sensitivity and sophistication. Her covers of standards from the Great American Songbook and Brazilian repertoires are always imbued with her own contemporary style.

Kent has already established herself as one of the new century's brightest jazz revelations. Voted best jazz vocalist at the 2001 British Jazz Awards, and the 2002 BBC Jazz Awards, she was also a 2009 Grammy nominee.

She will be appearing at The Gulbenkian on Thursday, April 21, at 7.45pm.

Tickets are priced at £20, or £18 for Encore! members. To book, phone 01227 769075 or visit www.thegulbenkian.co.uk.

Bubbling over with excitement

CHILDREN will get a chance to learn all about the physics and splendour of bubbles when American expert Louis Pearl comes to Canterbury.

The bubble-maker extraordinaire will be floating his way to The Gulbenkian theatre with his spectacular show.

Pearl has been creating amazing bubbles professionally since 1980. He has written two books about bubbles, made a video called Lights, Camera, Bubbles and has so far created 21 bubble inventions.

Pearl uses his show to teach about the physics behind the floating orbs. He teaches about surface tension, minimum surface areas, the Bernoulli Effect, the Venturi Effect, bubble colour and bubble chemistry.

So if you have ever wondered how bubbles pop or why soap and water make bubbles, Pearl has the answers.

The Amazing Bubble Show is on Saturday, April 16, at 2pm at The Gulbenkian. Tickets are £8, £7 for Encore! members and £35 for a family-and-friends ticket (five people). The show is suitable for ages three and above.

The Time Ball Museum, Deal; Sandwich jail,
Sandwich guildhall; St Margaret's Bay; Deal
Pier; Salutation house, Sandwich

THE historic towns of Deal and Sandwich are places that look at their best as Easter dawns and summer is just around the corner.

Gardens, historic buildings, individual shops and excellent cafés, bars and restaurants make them a twin delight for visitors.

As the weather warms up, a walk along the historic shoreline of Deal with its castle and award-winning pier, or a stroll along the banks of Sandwich's River Stour, are ideal ways to enjoy the very best of east Kent's varied landscapes.

Birds and other wildlife inhabit the reeds and riverbanks of the Stour, while fishing boats dot the shingle shore.

Antique shops, specialist book dealers and pubs with their tales of smugglers and haunted rooms all add to the atmosphere of towns steeped in the history of England.

Ports

Sandwich was a safe natural harbour for ships travelling between the Continent and London, and by the 11th to 13th centuries the town had become an important port.

Its wealth led to repeated raids by the Danes and the French and the town protected itself with fortified walls and a great boom to prevent the passage of ships upriver.

The alliance between the other important ports of Hastings, Rye, Hythe and Dover led to the formation of the Cinque Ports, which in return for providing ships and seamen were granted privileges and freedoms.

Tax- and toll-free trading was permitted and the five towns had their own courts to deal with their own affairs.

At their height, only the Church and the monarch were more powerful.

Many famous and important people have passed through Sandwich, including Archbishop of Canterbury Thomas a Becket during his escape from Henry II, and Richard the Lionheart on his return from the crusades.

The Black Prince even brought King John of France back as prisoner from his victory in Poitiers. Queen Elizabeth I was entertained in Sandwich to try to persuade her to help restore the harbour when it started to silt up and the town's fortunes went into decline.

Protestants fleeing persecution in The Netherlands and France settled after 1560 and introduced dyke drainage to permit market-gardening, weaving and other skills such as clay tile-making, which give us our characteristic Kent peg tiles, as well as numerous Dutch gabled houses.

The old town is enjoying new prosperity with tourist visits as it is probably the most complete medieval historic town in England.

The central conservation area's narrow twisting street plan remains essentially unchanged since the Domesday Book.

Deal is also mentioned as a village in the Norman work, which listed the wealth of newly-conquered England, but evidence suggests its history stretches back much further.

a trip along the coast

Julius Caesar is believed to have landed on the coast on two occasions in 55BC and 54BC. Deal gradually grew from a small fishing village and by the end of the 13th century it was an important port.

Sandown – of which only a few stones remain – Deal and Walmer castles were built in 1539-1542 by Henry VIII because of the threat of invasion by France and Spain. Their rounded walls were designed to resist cannon fire and if viewed from above they resemble the Tudor rose. Both Deal and Walmer castles are open to the public.

Walmer castle is the official residence of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports.

Political reformer William Pitt the Younger lived here with his niece Lady Hester Stanhope. She acted as his society hostess and was responsible for much of the original layout of the gardens.

After his death, she went on to become the most famous woman traveller of the age and sometimes dressed as a man, travelling in the Middle East and crossing the Syrian desert.

Other notable lord wardens include the Duke of Wellington, Winston Churchill and the Queen Mother.

All have left their mark, and mementoes from their time are on show – including Wellington's boots.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

BY SARAH ROSS

DARE I say it, but Whitstable eat your heart out. Even more so Canterbury – and, come to think of it (with the rare exception), the rest of east Kent. The grand surprise is Le Petit Poisson in Herne Bay.

Perched on the town's seafront, I had passed this small, unassuming restaurant a few times over the years without ever paying it much attention.

Herne Bay has never seemed the place to go for a good meal out, but friends in the town recommended this place highly. Indeed, they could almost be classed as regulars and have sometimes taken their young daughter there for an early supper – always a good sign.

Le Petit Poisson has recently been refurbished and enlarged, but it's still a small, intimate place with a real Continental feel – no frills or anything too fancy.

The same could be said of the menu (neatly scribed on blackboards): a choice of eight or so starters and the same number of main courses (plus a special). Small but perfectly formed. And it really was.

I chose moules marinières (£4.95) to start – I thought after the order had gone in that perhaps I should have been more adventurous but soon changed my mind when it appeared.

Steaming hot and perfectly cooked, the pile of mussels (and this was a small portion!) did not have that overpowering taste and smell of garlic so often harboured by this dish.

My sole regret was that the lovely French bread I would have used to mop up the juices had already been eaten, along with a complimentary bowl of olives, before the starter arrived (it had been a long time since lunch).

My guest went for rock oysters – he felt he had to when dining in these parts.

The truth, however, was that wherever in the world he was, these oysters would have taken some beating. There was a choice of three preparations – he skipped natural on this occasion and opted for three battered with lemon mayonnaise (£1.15 each) and three grilled with garlic, parsley and Parmesan (£1.25 each).

All were cooked to perfection, he said, the grilled version just edging out the battered if he were asked to name a favourite.

His main was a no-contest – with skate one of his favourite dishes anywhere, fish restaurant or otherwise, the pan-fried skate with lemon and caper butter (£14.50) was always going to win out here. Presented beautifully on crisp, flavoursome new potatoes, it was every bit as good as he had hoped.

Baked fillet of bass with a pinenut crust and red-wine shallots served on a bed of garlicky greens (again, not too overpowering) with new potatoes (£14.50) was my choice. Perfectly cooked and presented, it was divine.

The bass fell apart on the fork yet still retained its texture and taste.

The potato and greens were a great accompaniment, but it was the sweet, tanginess of the onion that best complemented the fish.

I am forever trying to cut back on the naughty things in life (food-wise). I was, on this occasion, though, happy to throw caution to the wind and calorie-intake rules out of the window for the sticky-toffee pudding and honeycomb parfait (£4.95).

A thick, finger-length slab of both were just perfect, the parfait particularly delightful.

My guest had lemon cheesecake and lemon sorbet for his dessert (£5.25). Again, excellent.

A bottle of the Argentinian house white – Trivento Chardonnay Torrontés (£11.95) – and freshly-ground coffees contributed to a final bill of £72.05, which was just about spot on.

A few miles up the road in trendy Whitstable, you could have added £20 or £30 to that in some establishments.

All in all, Le Petit Poisson had provided a flawless evening out. The venue is attractively designed inside, although my guest preferred upstairs to downstairs, which he thought was a little overwhelmed by the open-plan kitchen.

Purely a personal feeling, you understand, but he thought the 'kitchen window' was a little large for any real feeling of intimacy among diners.

This very minor qualm aside, all was good – really good. The service complemented the food perfectly – friendly, polite and low-key. Our Belgian host (and co-partner in the restaurant) was charming and chatty – and knew when to stop.

And my guest was particularly impressed when he asked the young waiter for an Irish coffee and he admitted it would have to be a Scottish because the restaurant whisky was, well, Scottish and not Irish.

This young man, like the restaurant he works in, will go far.

I DON'T BELIEVE IT! The Early Day Motion aims to protect property-owners from roving squatters, some of whom can cause costly damage

Campaigners fight to make squatting illegal

By NICK AMES

CALLS for squatting to be made illegal are coming from landlords' groups and some MPs.

Mike Weatherley MP wants support for an Early Day Motion calling for occupying someone else's property without paying rent to be criminalised.

The EDM has already been backed by 19 other MPs from both sides of the House of Commons. Campaign group Landlord Action is calling on homeowners to support the bid in two ways.

Firstly, they can sign a petition being presented at Downing Street, and secondly, by writing to their local MP encouraging them to back the campaign.

The group say current laws enable squatters to move into someone else's house, cause damage to it and then – once the owner manages to persuade the courts to take action to protect his elementary right to live in his own house – move on to another victim.

Squatters take advantage of the fact that in England and Wales, occupying someone else's house is not illegal. What is against the law is entering uninvited or using force or fraud.

To evict squatters, a homeowner has to prove that they entered his house without permission.

However, once an eviction order is obtained, the squatters face no punishment and are free to target another property.

In Scotland, squatting is against the law.

Yogesh Chandarana, spokesman for Landlord Action, said: "Essentially, squatters consume services they have not paid for. Many would feel that it is wrong.

"We have been advocates of homeowner rights for over 10 years, and we have seen the situation getting worse. It is reassuring to see that MPs such as Mike Weatherley are taking action to help the situation."

A spate of high-profile, well-publicised cases have brought squatting to the forefront recently, highlighting the growing injustice being done to homeowners by squatters, many of whom travel thousands of miles to engage in squatting knowing they will be protected by the law.

In one example, squatters in Brighton made a Freedom of Information request to see which council homes were empty.

An obvious strategy to target homes, it clearly demonstrates the level of organisation that squatters are now achieving.

Mr Weatherley said: "The problem is that squatting is not a criminal act, so they get evicted from one home and simply move on to another, to then be evicted and evicted and evicted. Brighton and Hove has been plagued by a number of repeat squatting cases and in at least the last seven years, police have made no squatting prosecutions due to the difficulties in obtaining evidence that technical criminal infringements have been made.

"We need to criminalise this act so these people can be held to account for their actions and we hope that the recent media attention around this topic will drum up enough support for the EDM to be submitted for debate in the House of Commons."

Savour your outdoor space on roof terrace

PROPERTY company Berkeley's new development rates outside spaces as being as important as interiors, with balconies and terraces a valuable extension of the home.

Berkeley has designed a new show home at Holborough Lakes, near Snodland, with a first-floor terrace extending from the lounge to provide a living space.

All the homes at the new development are built in keeping with a contemporary New England design, which features a white weatherboard façade with sleek geometric lines complementing the natural surroundings.

Arranged over three storeys, the three-bedroom property includes a private garden as well as the first-floor terrace.

The ground floor accommodates an open-plan kitchen and family room for parents who enjoy cooking while both entertaining guests and keeping a watchful eye on the children.

With individually-designed kitchens, this area has an informal dining area and extends out to the garden, making it an ideal place to enjoy sunny days by dining alfresco. There is also a guest cloakroom and separate utility room on the ground floor.

The first floor features the terrace that extends from the living area to provide the perfect place to relax and enjoy the surroundings. The second bedroom and family bathroom complete the accommodation on this floor. Upstairs on the second floor, the master bedroom suite has fitted wardrobes and an en-suite shower room.

The third bedroom has built-in wardrobes and there is additional storage space.

Interior designer Aimee Rook, from Callister Russell, said: "The show home was designed with a classic contemporary style in mind to appeal to a wide demographic.

"The upper living area offers an elegant style of furniture and uses a colour palette contrasting in navy and gold with warm-textured feature wallpaper. The focal point is the large double door leading to the terrace area.

"These were dressed with curtains in a beautiful navy fabric to frame this feature."

Holborough Lakes offers a combination of New England-designed one- and two-bedroom apartments and three- and five-bedroom family houses built around a waterside setting.

The freshwater lakes, play areas and woodland provide the perfect place to explore, discover and exercise. There is also a diving and water-sports academy, a private residents-only gym and designated fishing zones.

2011 Campaign

It's jobs for Kent

Rewarding switch into classroom

WOULD-be teachers are being urged to take the plunge and consider a career change into education.

According to the Training and Development Agency for Schools (TDA), more than half of about 11,600 teacher training inquiries in the South East last year were from people looking to change jobs.

Last month the organisation, which is responsible for the training and development of the national school workforce, held a 'discover teaching' seminar at Sandwich Technology School.

South East regional lead Balj Bhinder said: "In Kent we are fortunate to have such a wide choice of excellent places that provide teacher training.

"Teaching is a career that involves a lot of hard work but comes with incredible rewards.

"Immense satisfaction goes hand-in-hand when working with students as you watch them develop and succeed in their studies and there are excellent benefits in terms of earning potential and career development.

"When I visit schools in the county, I am impressed by the students and teachers in equal measure.

"There is always a strong sense of purpose within our schools, and this is testament to the skills of our teachers."

According to the TDA, the number of head teachers aged 30-44 increased by a third between 2004 and 2009.

On average, teachers in the South East earn £35,900 per annum with the potential to earn up to £56,950.

"Since I made the switch to teaching, I've never looked back," said Faye Thorndycroft, a science teacher at the Robert Napier School in Gillingham.

"It's certainly challenging but the rewards are immense. I can see how my work makes a difference to pupils every day.

Skills on the march with Marsh launch

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

A UNIQUE skills festival focusing on careers in and around Romney Marsh will be held next month.

The two-day event, at the Marsh Academy on May 6 and 7, is the first of its kind in Kent and will also provide career guidance and information on apprenticeships.

Kent County Council leader Cllr Paul Carter was among those who attended a party at the House of Lords to officially launch the festival, which is also being supported by City of London livery companies.

He said: "KCC believes emphatically in the need for good vocational and skills training.

"We have shown this over the years with the development of our network of vocational centres and a curriculum which offers quality training for all those who want it.

"The Romney Marsh Skills Festival is a tremendous opportunity to broaden horizons and encourage young people to develop the skills and experience that will help their careers to thrive and prosper in the years ahead."

The first day of the event will see 500 students from across Romney Marsh, Ashford and Shepway take part in taster sessions and speak with young people already working in a sector that interests them, to get advice before making their GCSE option choices.

The second will give talented post-16 students the chance to participate in full-day masterclasses in the six employment sectors of construction, fashion, energy and engineering, IT and telecoms, rural economy, and marine and maritime.

There will also be an exhibition exploring the history and development of Romney Marsh, apprenticeships, career guidance and more.

Folkestone and Hythe MP Damian Collins was also at the launch party, as was his predecessor and former Conservative Party leader, Lord Howard.

Mr Collins said: "The festival is a wonderful opportunity for young people and their parents to learn more about the array of skills, training and careers opportunities that are available.

"It is a great way of raising young people's ambitions and providing new and exciting options as they consider their next steps into work or training.

"The innovative link with the City livery companies adds an exciting new dimension that will present a tremendous mix of new and traditional skills, which I hope will inspire and excite young people as they make important decisions about their future learning and careers."

The ladder of success

VULNERABLE children from a Folkestone secondary school have successfully completed a unique course run by Kent Fire and Rescue Service.

The BTEC Level 2 fire and rescue service in the community qualification is offered to pupils aged 14 to 16 who struggle in a conventional school environment, and was taken up by nine youngsters from Pent Valley Technology College.

In addition to teaching specific firefighting skills, the course also attempts to tackle antisocial behaviour and negative attitudes towards authority.

Community safety manager Charlie Smith said: "The course provides a vocational learning opportunity to a diverse range of young people who may struggle to achieve academic success within traditional styles of learning.

"By working away from the classroom environment and interacting with professional firefighters and instructors, students engage and develop a positive approach to learning, building their self-esteem and confidence.

"The course also helps to raise their sense of personal responsibility and improve social awareness of community issues such as fire prevention and the consequences of arson."

Joint-funded by Kent Fire and Rescue and the Shepway Community Safety Partnership (CSP), the BTEC is equivalent to a GCSE at grade A-C level.

The youngsters who took part spent six weeks training at Folkestone fire station.

CSP antisocial behaviour manager Shaun Taylor said: "The positive change in behaviour and impact on the young people has been evident throughout the course.

"The most pleasing moment for me was when one of the boys' grandmother saw the final exercise and was overwhelmed by how her grandson's attitude had changed for the better."

Reaching for the sky

TWO architecture students from the University for the Creative Arts have received honourable mentions in a major international skyscraper competition.

Final year students Gary Kellett and Akram Fahmi, who are both based on the Canterbury campus, were praised by a panel of judges working on the eVolo Magazine contest. The competition recognises outstanding ideas that redefine skyscraper design through the use of new technologies, materials, programmes and so on.

UCA course leader John Bell said: "It is a great achievement for Gary and Akram individually, and for the graduate diploma at UCA Canterbury, that we have managed to gain two honourable mentions in this prestigious competition.

"They both took strong environmental stances in their submissions and challenged conventional notions of the skyscraper, which is why I believe they did so well.

"Their projects were submitted within the first few weeks of the first semester, which makes their achievements all the more gratifying."

Dramatic 10-week episode

MEDWAY Adult and Community Learning Service is offering a second playwriting course following the popularity of the first.

The 10-week course costs £57 and starts on Wednesday, April 27, at the adult education centre in Green Street, Gillingham.

Each session will run from 7-9pm.

The course will be taught by Paul Doust, a professional scriptwriter who has published his own plays and has experience of writing for EastEnders. He will teach students how to choose a story, lay out the script, use surprise and suspense, write character speech, and reveal characters through action.

COMERCIAL NOTICE

Adoption Notice Sexual Entertainment Venues Licensing of Sexual Entertainment Venues

Notice is hereby given that on the 2nd March 2011 Maidstone Borough Council passed a Resolution in exercise of their powers under Part 2 of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982, to adopt Schedule 3 of the Act as amended by Section 27 of the Policing and Crime Act 2009 for the licensing of Sexual Entertainment Venues. The resolution will come into force on the 1st May 2011.

The effect of this resolution is that sexual entertainment venues that provide 'relevant entertainment' as defined under the Act will need to be licensed by Maidstone Borough Council unless the requirement for a licence has been waived. There will be an opportunity for members of the public and enforcement agencies to object to the grant, renewal and transfer of licences and licences may be granted, granted with conditions or refused.

HIGHWAYS - Borough of Tonbridge & Malling

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL (EAST MALLING PARKING PLAN – IN THE BOROUGH OF TONBRIDGE & MALLING) (WAITING RESTRICTION AND ON-STREET PARKING PLACES) (AMENDMENT NO. 4) ORDER, 2011

Notice is hereby given that the KENT COUNTY COUNCIL acting as the local traffic authority and in exercise of its powers under Sections 1, 2 & 4 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 as amended, and of all other enabling powers and after consultation with the Chief Officer of Police in accordance with Part III of Schedule 9 to the said Act, made the above Order on 31st March, 2011

The effect of the Order will be to introduce The East Malling Parking Plan to improve access, safety and balance parking availability, as follows:

1. A Residents Preferential Parking scheme is proposed for the following roads: Chapel Street, Church Walk, High Street, eastern end of Mill Street and the Access Road to The Village Field Car Park, With parking restricted to marked, designated on-street parking bays where road width, junctions and access points allow, with a limit of 4 hours (no return 2 hours) between 8am – 6pm, Monday to Friday. Qualifying permit holders to be exempt from these restrictions.
2. It is proposed to install restrictions in the lay-by in Twisden Road to assist with customer parking with parking limited to 1 hour (no return 1 hour) between 8am and 6pm, Monday to Saturday.
3. Advisory roadside parking areas without waiting restrictions are proposed at the southern end of Middle Mill Road and the western end of Mill Street, where road width, junctions and access points allow to reduce obstruction and improve access for through traffic and public transport services.
4. An additional Disabled Persons Parking Bay is proposed in Church Walk and in the Access Road to The Village Field Car Park.
5. It is proposed to reduce the operating times of existing day-time waiting restrictions (single yellow lines) in The Rocks Road to prohibit parking between 10am to 10.30am Monday to Friday and extend this restriction towards the junction of Gilletts Lane. The same day-time restrictions are proposed for the full length of Rocks Close. These restrictions are proposed as a minimum measure to prevent long-term parking near East Malling Train Station.
6. It is proposed to introduce no waiting "At Any Time" (double yellow lines) in specific locations where it is necessary to reinforce the rules of the Highway Code and prevent parking in unsuitable places - The Access Road to The Village Field Car Park, Beech Road, Carnation Close, Carnation Crescent, Chapman Way, Chapel Street, Columbine Road, Cottenham Close, Elm Crescent, High Street, Jasmine Road, Larkspur Road, Lavender Road, Lilac Green, Lime Crescent, Mill Street, Middle Mill Road, New Road, Rocks Road, Stickens Lane, The Grange, The Rocks Road, Twisden Road and Wateringbury Road.

7. It is proposed to amend the layout of the 'School Keep Clear' restrictions in Chapman Way to protect the revised vehicular and pedestrian access arrangements to St James the Great Primary School and The Children's Centre. This is to support the aims of the School Travel Plan to improve safety for vulnerable child pedestrians. No change is proposed to the operating times of the existing restrictions

The Order sets the cost of a residents parking permit at £30 per annum (£120 for business permits) which includes a card of 10 visitors vouchers. Additional visitors' vouchers are set at the cost of £10 for a card of 10 visitors vouchers.

The Order will contain the usual exemptions to enable a vehicle to wait with police permission or for passengers to board or alight, for the loading and unloading of goods, for enabling work to be carried out in or adjacent to the road, for disabled persons and for emergency vehicles.

A copy of the Order together with a map, a copy of the Order to be amended by the Order, and a copy of the Councils reasons for making the Order, may be inspected during normal office hours at the offices of Tonbridge and Malling Council Offices, Kings Hill, Tonbridge Castle Gateway Centre, Kent County Council, Sessions House, County Hall Maidstone and East Malling and Larkfield Parish Council Offices, Church Farm, New Hythe Lane, Larkfield.

Anyone wishing to question the validity of the Order or of any of its provisions on the grounds that they are not within the powers conferred by the Act of 1984 as amended, or that any requirement of the Act of 1984 or any instrument made under them has not been complied with may, within six weeks from the date of the Order, make application for that purpose to the High Court. The Order will come into effect on 4th April, 2011.

NOTICE OF MODIFICATION ORDER

WILDLIFE AND COUNTRYSIDE ACT 1981

DEFINITIVE MAP AND STATEMENT FOR THE FORMER EXCLUDED AREA OF WHITSTABLE

DEFINITIVE MAP MODIFICATION ORDER 2011

The above Order was made on 18th March 2011 under section 53 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. If confirmed, it will modify the Definitive Map and Statement for the area by adding a Footpath (CWX41) which commences on Green Lane and runs in a northerly direction for 55 metres before turning in a north- easterly direction and continuing for 44 metres to its connection with Harwich Street (Between the points A and B on the Order Plan). The path has a width of 0.9 metres at its entrance from Green Lane and widens to 1.2 metres for the first 55 metres, the path widens to 1.4 metres for the remaining 44 metres. The route then narrows at its connection with Harwich Street to 0.9 metres due to a lamppost on the route.

All distances are approximate, all directions are general.

A copy of the Order and Map may be seen free of charge during normal office hours at the offices of Canterbury City Council, Military Road, Canterbury, Kent, CT1 1YW or at the Kent County Council, Countryside Access Service, Invicta House, County Hall, Maidstone, Kent ME14 1XX. Copies of the Order and Map may also be purchased there.

Any representation about or objection to the Order must be sent or delivered in writing to Matthew Garvey at the Kent County Council (address as below) no later than 16 May 2011. Please state the grounds on which it is made.

If no such representations or objections are duly made to the Order (or to any part of it), or if any so made are withdrawn, the Kent County Council, instead of submitting the Order to the Secretary of State (or part of it if the Authority has by Notice to the Secretary of State so elected under paragraph 5 of schedule 15 to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981) may itself confirm the Order (or that part of the Order). If the Order is sent to the Secretary of State for the Environment (in whole or in part), any representations or objections which have been duly made and not been withdrawn will be sent with it.

WILDLIFE AND COUNTRYSIDE ACT 1981

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL (PUBLIC FOOTPATH KH49, BREDHURST)

PUBLIC PATH DIVERSION AND DEFINITIVE MAP AND STATEMENT MODIFICATION ORDER 2011

The above Order, made under Section 119 of the Highways Act 1980 will divert the entire width of that length of public footpath numbered KH49 which commences on The Street between the properties Cabana and Cherry Tree at NGR TQ 7973 6239 (Point A on the Order plan) and runs eastwards for 388 metres to its connection with public bridleway KH49A and Kemsley Street Road at NGR TQ 8010 6231 (point B on the Order plan), to a new length of Public Footpath KH49 with a width of 3.5 metres between fencing, which commences at the aforementioned point B and runs north-westwards for 184 metres to its connection to Kemsley Street Road at NGR TQ 7996 6242 (point C on the Order plan).

All directions general, all distances approximate.

A copy of the Order and the Map have been placed and may be seen free of charge at the offices of Maidstone Borough Council, Maidstone House, King Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME16 8HG or at the Environment & Waste Division at Invicta House, County Hall, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XX, during office hours. Copies of the Order and Map may be purchased there.

Any representations about or objections to the Order may be sent in writing to Mrs Maria McLauchlan at Countryside Access Service, Invicta House, County Hall, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XX (Tel: 01622 696871) before 6th May 2011. Please state the grounds on which they are made.

If no representations or objections are duly made, or if any so made are withdrawn, Kent County Council may confirm the Order as an unopposed Order. If the Order is sent to the Secretary of State for the Environment for confirmation any representations and objections which have not been withdrawn will be sent with the Order.

New Mercedes C-Class is a breath of fresh air

First Drive

IAINDOOLEY

Mercedes Benz C-Class

TWO BIG numbers you need to be aware of when considering Mercedes-Benz's revised C-Class: 2,000 changes have been made to the car and, since it was launched in 2007, more than one million have been sold.

Through the decades the C-Class has charted a steady course straddling both sporty and luxury sides of the compact premium experience and always aiming to offer elements of its larger models at a more affordable price point. Now, with ever-increasing focus on emissions, consumption and refinement, Mercedes has thoroughly revamped its core model – prices start at £25,515.

The car's nose and tail have been tweaked slightly – radiator, lights, that sort of thing – and there's still the visual difference between 'classic' SE/Elegance and Sport models, with the latter boasting a subtle AMG branded bodykit, AMG wheels and a lower ride height.

Inside there's a new dashboard design, the car's colour display screen is now fixed in the upper level of the fascia and the general impression is a welcome shift to a simpler layout inspired in part by the CLS.

Some things don't change, though. The cabin ambience is as refined as ever, and the wide choice of trim, seat and instrument colour options ensure both young and old buyers are catered for.

Mercedes hopes everyone will benefit from reduced running costs, in particular company car drivers opting for four-cylinder diesel variants. Bold claims are made that every new engine is both more powerful and more efficient than its predecessor.

While all cars come with a six-speed manual gearbox as standard, there's now the option of an improved seven-speed auto across the range. Another feature across the range is engine stop-start technology to further boost the car's eco credentials.

The end result is a more frugal ownership experience. Taking the C220 CDI (from £30,975) for example: in manual form the car posts an impressive 117g/km CO2 rating and 64.2mpg on the combined cycle.

The best news of all is the complete lack of compromise behind the wheel. Manual transmission Mercedes cars haven't been that great in the past, but things have improved in recent years. The gearbox in the C220 CDI, like other variants, delivers a slick, accurate performance. Engine refinement is also first rate, while performance is more than you could ask for. A willing unit, the 2.1-litre, four-cylinder is quiet and responsive in equal measure.

Ride comfort is also very good, with a sensible balance of comfort and agility. Pitch and roll is minimal, while the Sport vari-ant's tuned suspension and bigger wheels don't harm but rather enhance the experience for enthusiastic drivers. In the petrol-driven car the experience is broadly similar, only the engine is that bit quieter.

Along with the improved driving experience, the C-Class comes with a wider choice of standard and optional equipment.

There's a heavy bias towards safety kit, with a lot of 'big car' stuff from the E, CLS and S-Class having trickled down to the C-Class. From lane departure and blind spot warning systems to active dipping headlights and intelligent cruise control, the car isn't short of helpful toys.

The same is true on the comfort front, with the optional sat-nav supported by standard fit climate and cruise control, a multi-function steering wheel and the usual electric mirrors and windows.

UK buyers can choose from SE, Elegance and Sport, with the latter adding a subtle AMG bodykit and branded wheels, lower ride height, speed sensitive steering, sports front seats, a three-spoke steering wheel and gearchange paddles for auto gearbox variants.

Saab goes even further upmarket with new 9-3

SAAB has revamped its mainstay compact executive 9-3 model, with luxury as the hallmark.

Standard kit includes alloys, leather-trimmed interior, heated front seats, park assist, Bluetooth phone integration, automatic dimming mirrors inside and outside the vehicle, electric folding mirrors and automatic rain sensor wipers as standard.

The 9-3 also has a racier new look with new front bumpers, headlamps and grille and all saloon variants receive a boot-mounted aerodynamic spoiler.

Under the bonnet, two new 2.0-litre petrol turbo engines produce 163bhp and 220bhp and include direct injection. Both units are available with a six-speed manual and automatic transmission.

In terms of CO2 per unit of horsepower, the new manual 220bhp 2.0-litre petrol engine in the 9-3 Aero saloon and SportWagon (estate) is the most powerful sub 160g/km unit on sale in the UK.

The 9-3 1.9-litre manual twin turbo diesel line-up also offers class-leading CO2 emissions of 119g. New 9-3 prices start at £21,495.

Peugeot supermini gets Euro reliability crown

WARRANTY Direct has revealed that the most reliable car made by a European car company is the Peugeot 207 – model line-up pictured.

The direct sale consumer warranty firm analysed more than 20,000 live policies on three- to seven-year-old cars made by European manufacturers and compared claims for repairs.

This survey showed that the enormous popularity of Peugeot's top-selling supermini is down to more than good looks, economy, practicality and a fun-to-drive nature. Owners of the French model suffered a repair rate of just six per cent in an average year – the next best contender, but some distance behind, was the Fiat Panda at 14 per cent.

'Swapsies' deal may help the ix35 queue

HYUNDAI is offering to help buyers on a lengthening waiting list for its popular ix35 model.

The Korean marque says its ix35 1.7-litre diesel model is more freely available, allowing Hyundai to offer such cars to its 200 longest waiting customers as an interim solution.

The offer will enable customers to own a new 1.7-litre diesel manual ix35 immediately, and run it until their order for a ix35 2.0-litre diesel version is ready. Customers can then move to the new 2.0-litre car – all for the price of their original order.

Hyundai UK's managing director, Tony Whitehorn, said: "Customer satisfaction is our priority and we hope that this offer of an alternative ix35 will be attractive for our longest waiting customers."

Seat's little tax busters

SAM DAVISON

CHANCELLOR George Osborne's Budget has put Seat's super-frugal line-up of Ibiza E Ecomotive models in pole position for fleet and business drivers looking to keep a lid on their company car tax and running costs.

Company car tax – referred to as benefit in kind (BIK) – is based on a percentage of the vehicle's recommended retail price, the type of fuel it uses, the amount of CO2 it emits and the driver's salary level.

Prior to the Chancellor's speech, petrol-engined cars emitting between 99g/km and 120g/km fell into the lowest BIK bracket for conventional-engined vehicles and were taxed at 10 per cent. Low-emitting diesels like the Ibiza, meanwhile, were taxed at 13 per cent because of the three per cent diesel surcharge.

However, the Chancellor's decision to tighten the lower limit for low-carbon vehicles from April, 2013, reduces that bottom BIK threshold to 94g/km or below.

Fortunately for latest generation Ibiza E

Ecomotive drivers, or prospective purchasers, their cars will still qualify for the very lowest diesel BIK rate of 13 per cent thanks to CO2 emissions as low as 92g/km.

Ally this to the fact that Ibiza E Ecomotives – available in sporty SC, practical 5dr and capacious ST estate bodystyles – are capable of more than 80mpg on the official combined cycle and it's easy to see them tempting more fleet and company managers and their drivers.

Seat UK fleet sales chief Nick Andrews, said: "The Ibiza E Ecomotive range is proving increasingly attractive to a wide variety of our customers with, in particular, the ST version making great inroads thanks to its practicality and style."

The third generation 'green' Ibiza, now badged E Ecomotive to reflect its super-frugal performance, achieves its eco status through a tweaked 75PS (74bhp) 1.2-litre diesel, Start/Stop technology and recovery of energy from braking to recharge the battery, this last by-passing the alternator and saving a drain on the engine.

Barretts scoops BMW award

BARRETT'S of Canterbury's Accident Repair Centre is celebrating a coveted award from German premium manufacturer BMW.

The Barretts group, established in 1902, operates Broad Oak BMW dealerships in Canterbury and Ashford backed by the repair centre, which has just been made 2010 BMW Bodyshop of the Year after a period of review and enhancement of its services.

Barretts' MD Paul Barrett said: "This award demonstrates what can be achieved with determination and focus. I am delighted for workshop manager Darren Blunden and his team. "The changes we have made mean that whether a customer meets one of our bodyshop advisors in Ashford, or one of our receptionists in Canterbury, they experience the same high-quality service and consistent experience of the Barretts brand."

He added that, in difficult trading conditions, bodyshops were increasingly recognising that every client contact provides an opportunity to develop new sales opportunities.

"There is much talk of 'up-selling'," he said.

"But the best results are achieved by organisations which adopt a coherent customer service philosophy that extends throughout the business."

"Barretts is a prime example of a company that is achieving success by adopting a 'joined-up' approach to influencing retail customers; putting in place systems and processes that have enabled them to overcome the universal challenge of maintaining effective communications across multiple sites."

Darren Blunden said: "We already had good customer service processes in place. However, the workshop focused all our minds on the factors critical to our success in terms of seeking out new business from existing clients, the importance of adopting consistent practices across all sites and proactive marketing of the Barretts brand."

"Later, with great audit results, a strong training record and achievement of our Key Performance Indicators (KPIs), we're going from strength-to-strength."

Chevrolet Orlando

IT CAN'T be an accident that Chevrolet has created an all-new seven-seat MPV named after the theme park capital of the world – Orlando in Florida.

It offers entertainment with every ride, minus the bumps and worst rolling motion of some other MPVs I could mention.

It is also good value, cramming in seven comfortably and with Transatlantic lines that suggest some Florida sunshine might be glinting off the gold Chevy badge on the grille.

However, the newcomer will not be sold in the States, probably because it is a tad small for the home market's burger and fries-fuelled demographics.

But that muscular styling makes it stand apart in a rather more slimline UK and European MPV market and, combined with good handling characteristics for this sector, should attract male buyers who would normally have to be strong-armed into buying a people carrier "for the sake of the family".

The beefy Orlando's good manners derive from a slightly stretched version of the same platform used for the US brand's sharply styled middleweight saloon, the Cruze, and the hugely impressive Astra hatchback from GM stablemate Vauxhall.

The latter also produces the big-selling Zafira seven-seater and will surely be narked that GM bosses have allowed Chevy to launch such a competent in-house rival to muscle in when there is quite enough other pressure from the revised VW Touran and Mazda5, all-new – though pug-ugly – Ford Grand C-Max, suave Peugeot 5008 and futuristic Citroen C4 Grand Picasso.

Adding insult to injury, the arrangement and versatility of the Orlando's seven seats is also reminiscent of the Zafira, with decent accommomodation for all but the leggiest adults in the rear pair, while conversion from full seven-up mode to cavernous van and to all other permutations takes just seconds.

I was also impressed by cabin quality; Chevrolet's global market aspirations took off when GM acquired the failed Korean Daewoo motor operation a few years ago, but it inherited some terrible interior finishing that is fast being addressed.

But while you can sort the visual and tactile quality relatively easily, the design and ergonomics takes more practice and the Korean-built Orlando really could do with more stowage space – though the boot is huge when the rearmost chairs are folded.

There is also the major gaff of having the front 12v power socket mounted close to the handbrake and gearshift; by the time I had double-connected a sat nav and little un's latest game player it seemed like I was changing gear by plunging my hand into a saucepan of spaghetti.

Of course, the Orlando still won't set your heart racing in the driving department either – but few MPVs do. However, it is impressive that a large and hefty yet smooth riding vehicle such as this does not loll about too badly.

The 2.0-litre diesel engine, even in the lower 130PS (129bhp) output of the test car, drives this fun bus well too yet still averages in the late 40s for mpg.

On paper, the alternative 163PS (162bhp) diesel offers little more performance, is no better or worse on fuel and will cost more upfront to buy.

The clear-cut buying decision though is avoiding the entry engine option – the 1.8-litre petrol. It will catch the eye with its £16,395 start price plus usual Chevy five-year warranty deal and get you talking to the dealer, but around £1,200 gets you into a diesel and will deliver far better performance and fuel economy – a no brainer.

The 2.0-litre diesel VCDi in mid-range LT trim looks like the right buy for most people and will set you back £18,645 – a lot of Orlando rides for the money.

The Verdict

DON'T LIKE:

the lack of thought apparent in the cabin layout, but this is nit-picking

NOT SURE:

UK buyers are yet fully aware of Chevrolet's recent gains in quality to add to undoubted value

REALLY LIKE:

how the Orlando stands apart from established players

Different elements to measures of inflation

Q What is the difference between inflation as measured by the consumer prices index and the retail prices index? They are both way in front of anything that is offered as an interest rate by the banks, so there is no chance of the ordinary person's savings keeping pace, let alone making a profit.

A Both measures of inflation are based on changes in the cost of living, but they include different ingredients. The biggest difference is that the CPI does not include housing costs. If average rents or mortgage rates rise, the RPI rate of inflation will go up, but the CPI will not be affected. Why does this matter? It matters most to pensioners whose income is linked to rises in the cost of living. A rise in RPI can easily outstrip a rise in the CPI, so a pension tied to the CPI will not fare as well. But I suspect your question is based on savings interest rather than pensions. And you are right – it is hard for savings to keep pace with prices. There are few answers to the question of how you can guard your savings against inflation. The Saffron Building Society (0800 072 1100) offers one of the few accounts that stand a chance of matching inflation. It has a six-year investment account linked to the RPI, and if you use it as an Isa, you can sidestep income tax and get a genuine inflation-proof return. The minimum investment is £3,000, but only dive in if you are sure you can stay the course – pull out early and you will not get the full benefit. The other answer is to sit back and wait. There was a hint in the recent budget that National Savings index-linked certificates are about to make a comeback. No date has been announced but if past performance is anything to go by, we could see a modest real return on top of inflation, which would be good news for all savers.

Q I have about £4,000 outstanding on my Visa card account. If I transfer this to a different card, which will give the longest interest-free period?

A For the past week or two, the answer to your question has changed almost as quickly as I can write it. MBNA (0800 068 8788) broke new ground when it announced it would give 18 months interest-free to new cardholders who switched balances from their old cards. However, there is a "handling fee" of 2.88pc – about £115 to you. Virgin (0800 096 9939) also went for an interest-free period of 18 months on balance transfers, and threw in a zero interest rate on purchases for the first three months. Its transfer fee is 2.89pc, which would also cost you about £115. But Barclaycard (0800 731 0200) seems to be taking the lead. Its interest-free period is now 20 months, though the transfer will cost you 3.2pc, or £128. Whichever you choose, you will only get the best deal if you repay your outstanding balance during the interest-free period.

TONY HETHERINGTON

Q I wrote to you a year ago about my shares in Bradford & Bingley. As I said then, the government effectively stole my shares by nationalising the bank and refusing compensation. This decision has now been upheld, so is there any avenue left for shareholders to pursue?

A The government's refusal to compensate shareholders has been upheld by an independent valuer because when the company was nationalised in 2008 it was on the verge of bankruptcy. If the government had withdrawn financial support, Bradford & Bingley would have collapsed and your shares would have been worthless anyway. The real question mark hangs over the issue of fresh shares in the company a couple of months before it failed. If it was solvent then, what made it fail just weeks later? There is an action group of shareholders that is calling for a public inquiry. There are details online at www.bbaactiongroup.org, but I would be surprised if any compensation offer emerged from Whitehall now.

Q I paid a bill with a cheque dated for March 1, allowing time for my February pay to get to my bank account, but the company banked the cheque in February and my bank accepted it. This made me overdrawn. Should my bank have honoured the cheque before March 1?

A If you give someone a post-dated cheque, this is nothing more than a request to them not to deposit the cheque before that date. It will not stop your bank cashing the cheque or taking any notice of the date on it, I'm afraid.

Q Is a workplace syndicate in the National Lottery legal and binding? Could the organiser refuse to share out any prize money?

A You would have to prove there was a binding agreement. To be safe, draw up a letter saying how much everyone pays, and how much they would get from any prize money. Then get everyone to sign it, and make copies for each member of the syndicate.

FAMILY AID: Students are being helped with higher fees by their parents and grandparents.

Grandparents support students

Nearly a quarter of all parents and grandparents have begun to make provision for higher university tuition fees, even though most adults think would-be students themselves should take at least some responsibility for paying their way through further education.

The role played by grandparents is highlighted by the Virgin Money research, which suggests that more than 20pc of people aged over 65 are saving to help their grandchildren through university.

From September next year, annual tuition fees will rise to up to £9,000, although they will be paid in arrears once students earn above a certain level.

Grant Bather of Virgin Money said: "Tuition fees are going to rise substantially and it is clear that parents and grandparents are already starting to prepare for the financial burden.

"It is interesting that people believe students themselves should be contributing as well. Ultimately, they will be the beneficiaries so there is some justice in them saving.

"However saving for potential bills of up to £27,000 will be a major undertaking."

Time is running out for tax-free saving

People wanting to take advantage of tax-free saving this year have just a few days left to act, otherwise they will lose their annual allowances for good.

The current tax year ends on April 5, and while a lot has been said about the changes due to come in at the start of 2011-12, it's important not to overlook the opportunities that will disappear at the same time.

With average household disposable income falling for the first time in three decades, a growing number of people might find they have no spare cash to save. Others might feel they do not want to put their money away at a time when interest rates are paltry and so few accounts are keeping pace with inflation.

But for those who do want to take advantage of the tax-free benefits of cash Isas, the good news is that rates have been creeping up recently. They are still nowhere near the levels of a few years ago, but it's possible to get rates of 3pc-plus on the high street without too much hunting around and without having to lock your money away for a minimum period.

If you have some money to put away

By ADAM AIKEN
MyMoney24 editor

but you are not sure whether to use this year's £5,100 cash Isa allowance, remember that anything you put aside now will be well placed to benefit when interest rates start to return to their previous healthy levels.

What you cannot do is post-date your allowance – in other words, if you don't use it now, you will not be able to play catch-up in the future.

"The tax benefits may not be massive in year one, but building up an Isa nest egg over a period of years will prove a wise and rewarding strategy," said Andrew Hagger, an analyst at Moneynet.co.uk.

"With savings rates still historically very low, making use of an Isa is a simple yet effective way of boosting your interest income. The maximum cash deposit for the current tax year is £5,100, but even if you have a smaller sum to save, an Isa still makes financial sense."

There is always a degree of guesswork when it comes to future returns, but there is a growing school of thought among the experts that the best option is a variable-rate account. Going instead for a fixed rate might mean you get a higher return initially, but if rates start to rise, you won't enjoy the benefits.

Kevin Bray, a banking analyst at Defaqto, said: "With so much uncertainty surrounding when and how quickly the Bank of England base rate will rise, it is difficult for people to judge whether they should opt for longer-term savings options.

"Given this situation, it is important for savers considering fixed-term options to be fully aware of the impact a base rate rise could have."

Mr Hagger at Moneynet added: "With variable-rate Isas, you can benefit from a tax-free rate but still retain immediate access to your cash should you need it, and some accounts can be opened with as little as £1.

"The Isa market has been a hotbed of activity with providers clambering for those important best-buy places in the hope it will drive large amounts of business as we approach the tax-year crossover."

The gas and electricity regulator is baring its teeth at the industry. ADAM AIKEN reports.

The announcement that domestic fuel companies will have to give customers at least 30 days' notice of price increases is the latest salvo in a campaign being waged against suppliers by the energy regulator.

The change, which will come into effect at the end of April, will be a vast improvement from the current system, which allows gas and electricity suppliers to wait up to 90 days before informing people of any price increases.

The news from regulator Ofgem was given a warm welcome by industry analysts.

"If people are going to pay more for their energy, clearly they need to know in advance, not as much as three months later," said Audrey Gallacher, head of energy at Consumer Focus.

"This long-awaited move should help customers to budget for any price rises and make informed decisions early on about whether to switch suppliers."

Lisa Greenfield, energy analyst at Confused.com, said: "It's shocking that currently suppliers don't have to tell their customers until three months after the event. This wouldn't be acceptable with any other sort of financial product and it shouldn't be the case with energy, either."

The latest move by Ofgem follows a recent announcement of a wide-ranging set of proposals which the regulator said would represent a "radical overhaul" of the sector.

Those proposals included sweeping away complex pricing and opening up the market to smaller suppliers, with a threat to the industry of referral to the Competition Commission if it frustrated any reforms.

Ofgem said it found competition was being stifled by a combination of tariff complexity, poor supplier behaviour and a lack of transparency.

In particular, the regulator said the so-called Big Six suppliers had adjusted their prices in response to rising costs more quickly than they cut them when wholesale prices fell.

"Energy companies have failed to play it straight with consumers and so Ofgem is proposing to break the stranglehold the Big Six have over the electricity market by making them auction up to 20pc of their generation output," said Ofgem chief executive Alistair Buchanan.

"This would increase price transparency and make it easier for new players to enter the retail market. Consumers have told us that energy suppliers' prices are too complicated. It is no surprise that they are bamboozled when [the number of tariffs] has increased from 180 to more than 300 since 2008.

"That is why we are planning to sweep away this complexity so suppliers' prices are fully exposed to allow easy price comparisons."

Ms Greenfield, of Confused.com, said more than 50 new tariffs and price changes had been introduced in the past year alone.

"We have been asking for simplification in the energy market for a long time, so it's exciting news to see Ofgem taking steps to tackle the Big Six's pricing and their tendency to push prices up quicker than they lower them," she said.

"Consumer confidence in the gas and electricity suppliers is at an all-time low, at a time when many households are facing higher household bills, so these changes will certainly be welcome news to many."

Scott Byrom, energy manager at Moneysupermarket.com, said: "For years there has been speculation that the speed at which price increases hit consumers is far quicker than the rate at which price decreases are passed on, and Ofgem is finally looking to stop this unfair practice which sees bill payers left severely out of pocket."

"Also under the microscope is the ease of being able to switch energy deals and the clarity of information around this. Ofgem has identified there is much more the energy companies can do to enable customers to shop around and get better deals on their energy, and to stop bill payers forking out more than necessary for their gas and electricity."

The action by Ofgem has support at the top of government. In his recent budget speech, chancellor George Osborne promised to "closely follow developments in the energy sector in the light of the Ofgem review".

“ We have been asking for simplification in the energy market for a long time, so it's exciting news to see Ofgem taking steps to tackle the Big Six's pricing and their tendency to push prices up quicker than they lower them ”

PICK OF THE WEEK

In association with the experts at Moneyfacts.co.uk, we highlight some of the best new products launched this week.

Savings: Tesco Bank

A rate increase of 0.2pc sees Tesco's Two-Year Fixed-Rate Saver deal propelled into the top five of the medium-term market with a rate of 3.85pc. Savers can invest between £2,000 and £1m. Further additions and early access are not allowed. The account can be operated by telephone only by savers aged 18 and over.

Why is it good?

Investors looking to lock funds away for a short term should be pleased with this deal, although as with many bonds investors need to commit for the full term as early withdrawals are not permitted.

Savings: Lloyds TSB

The Two-Year Fixed-Rate Cash Isa deal has increased by 0.45pc to 3.6pc. Savers can invest a minimum of £3,000 and further additions are allowed whilst the issue remains open. Funds can be accessed early, subject to a loss of interest. Transfers in are accepted. The account is available to savers aged 16 and over.

Why is it good?

The rate increase has helped boost its position within the highly-competitive fixed-rate Isa market. Paying 3.6pc, the deal sits just below the current two-year fixed market leader, and should please investors looking for a fixed rate with a degree of flexibility on withdrawals.

Mortgages: Skipton Building Society

Skipton has a new two-year fixed-rate deal at 6.19pc until April 30, 2013. The maximum loan-to-value is 90pc. Second-time and remortgage customers can borrow up to £1m, while first-time buyers can borrow up to £250,000. There is a fee of £195. Remortgage borrowers get free valuations and free legal fees, and flexible features such as payment holidays are available to all borrowers.

Why is it good?

Following its product review last week, Skipton has launched another selection of fixed-rate deals. The high loan-to-value will please borrowers with limited deposits, while the low fee and generous incentives for remortgage customers will help to keep overall costs down.

Mortgages: Hanley Economic Building Society

The Hanley has launched a discounted-rate mortgage at 3.79pc (a 1.4pc discount) for three years. The maximum loan-to-value is 80pc and no fee is payable. Customers can borrow between £30,000 and £500,000. There is the flexibility to make overpayments of up to 10pc of the outstanding balance.

Why is it good?

This new rate offers borrowers with deposits of 20pc or more a rather competitive rate. The lack of an arrangement fee should please borrowers looking to keep their additional costs to a minimum.

In the zone to combat 'one size fits all' policy

By SIMON ROBINSON

simon.robinson@kosmedia.co.uk

A MOVE to ask the Government to amend its strict enterprise zone policy has been welcomed by Kent business leaders.

The Department for Business said it would locate its 10 remaining start-up zones equally, with no more than one zone per Local Enterprise Partnership (LEP) area.

Kent is part of the largest LEP in the country, as it has been grouped together with Essex and East Sussex, leaving the county's most deprived areas with a slim chance of gaining enterprise zone status.

The title comes with associated business perks as firms that choose to set up in enterprise zones benefit through Government incentives such as business discount rates, lenient planning rules and superfast broadband.

Kent County Council leader Paul Carter said the one-for-one ruling has left Kent short-changed and that he would write to the Government in a bid to change ministers' minds.

"It doesn't seem right that, having been encouraged to scale up and form one of the largest LEPs in the country with Essex and East Sussex, we are now being penalised for it," he said.

"Compare that with Oxfordshire, which is a smaller county than Kent yet has its own LEP, and you can see how unfair this ruling is. I don't think they've thought it through and we have a good case to try to get that decision removed. We will protest it and see where it gets us."

Cllr Carter's concerns were reinforced by the Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce.

Chief executive Jo James said: "We've got to put pressure on the Government. It doesn't seem right that we've been forced into forming the biggest LEP in the country and are then penalised. The knock-on effects of Pfizer's withdrawal from Sandwich could be devastating, so east Kent is an ideal location for an enterprise zone. The county is a priority and we'd like to reiterate everything Cllr Carter has said."

UNITY: Paul Carter and Jo James are among those calling for an east Kent enterprise zone

Andrew Aves, Kent and Medway development manager for the Federation of Small Businesses, said: "Our view is very much that one size should not fit all. This arbitrary allocation is not appropriate for our combined LEP, as there is a serious need that exists in our county, particularly in east Kent."

"Our concern is that this is an area of deprivation that has serious challenges facing it in the next few years and we hope the Government reconsiders its policy."

Chancellor George Osborne named 11 new enterprise zones, mainly in the North, as part of his spring Budget last week. He ignored east Kent, despite the potential loss of 5,000 jobs as a result of Pfizer leaving Sandwich next year.

Cllr Carter said he had not been expecting the Pfizer site to be among the first 11 zones as he had been told the decision-making process had begun some time before the pharmaceutical giant announced it was pulling out of Kent.

He added that proposals for both a Pfizer enterprise zone and another in the Thames Gateway area were both at advanced stages.

Positive feedback boosts Osborne

THE Chancellor has been given a post-Budget boost with a glowing response from the Institute of Directors (IoD).

A survey of company directors revealed that 58 per cent of those questioned were more confident about the long-term outlook of the economy as a result of the Budget, with only 9 per cent feeling less confident.

Seventy per cent of respondents said they felt the Budget would have a positive impact on the economy, while 55 per cent believed it would have a positive impact on their businesses.

George Osborne's decision to reduce corporation tax was met with the highest approval rating, with 93 per cent of directors backing the move.

IoD South director Rodger Broad said: "The economic recovery is fragile, so it is good news that business leaders have responded so positively to the Budget."

"While overall there is much to welcome, our region, which alongside London is the only net contributor to the Exchequer, has been overlooked for Enterprise Zone status, which is very disappointing. The Government really must acknowledge that the South East and its businesses also need support if they are to continue to grow and create the jobs that will drive the UK's economic recovery. There is a real risk of strangling the golden goose."

"At a time when confidence could make the difference between recession and recovery, the IoD's Policy Voice survey suggests that the Budget has improved the outlook for business investment. And at a time when international developments are making people worried, the Chancellor has helped steady nerves at home."

• More feedback from the Budget – see inside.

IOD SURVEY FINDINGS

• 58 per cent are more confident about the long-term economic outlook as a result of the Budget, with only 9 per cent feeling less confident.

• 69 per cent believe Osborne is doing a good job running the economy as Chancellor, while 14 per cent do not think that he is doing a good job.

• 70 per cent believe the Budget will have a positive impact on the economy, with only 6 per cent believing it will have a negative impact.

• 55 per cent believe the Budget will have a positive impact on their business, with only 8 per cent believing it will have a negative impact.

• 93 per cent believe reducing the main corporation tax rate to 26p this year and 23p by 2014 will be positive for the economy, with 74 per cent stating it will be positive for their businesses.

• 43 per cent think the increase in the lifetime limit for entrepreneurs' relief from £5million to £10m will be positive for their businesses.

• 48 per cent think the improvement to the capital allowances for short-life assets will be positive for their businesses.

• 81 per cent think increasing the limits for investment under the Enterprise Investment Scheme is a positive step.

• 65 per cent think moving an increase in fuel duty to an increased tax on North Sea oil production when the oil price is high is a positive step.

Comment

CHANCELLOR George Osborne came through his second Budget speech relatively unscathed, thanks in main to a savvy petrol-price cut.

Having urged the public to assess him on his growth results this time last year, and having failed to deliver, Osborne had to prepare for the Opposition sharpening their knives ahead of his follow-up House of Commons address.

Osborne was forced to announce revised growth forecasts for 2011, down from 2.1 to 1.7 per cent, and was met with howls of derision from the Opposition benches.

These howls intensified when Osborne moved on to his hard-hitting headline-grabbers, which he preceded with the in-it-together line: "We're all suffering in this recession".

Labour MPs were quick to ask just how much the Chancellor, the heir to the Osborne & Little wallpaper multinational, is suffering.

But to Osborne's credit, he refused to be fazed and delivered the remainder of his Budget, including his fuel-cut ace-up-the-sleeve, with purpose and poise.

The following day's headlines focused on the fuel-duty cancellation and 1p fall at the petrol pumps, rather than on Osborne's failure to hit his self-imposed targets or revised growth figures.

Perhaps the Chancellor is this government's Teflon Tony, to whom nothing will stick? Time will tell, but what is clear is that his Budget was largely well received on a number of fronts.

His help for housing, enterprise zones and discounted business rate measures were all welcomed by Kent businesses in last week's Business Week.

With the combined effect of winter snow and Middle East troubles hindering the UK's recovery from recession, Osborne has been given time to get the country back on track.

It is now up to him and his policies to deliver the goods – leading to sustained growth in 2011/12.

If his third Budget figures are as bad as his second, I don't think even a 10p drop in fuel prices could paper over the cracks.

Cruising into the new season

THE Port of Dover welcomed the first cruise ship of the year this week. The AIDAcara docked in town on Monday before departing for Hamburg, Amsterdam and Antwerp.

Its passengers are among 240,000 cruise enthusiasts set to stop off in the county this year. The cruise industry has boomed in recent years, with routes out of Dover to Europe and the rest of the world.

Holland America Line (HAL) has this year added a luxury Dover to New York service. Port of Dover commercial and marketing head Kate O'Hara said she expected demand to rise further still.

"The beginning of a new season is always an exciting time for us as the cruise terminals are reopened to travellers," she said. "Staff are eager to welcome not only new and returning visitors, but ships and crews on their inaugural visit to our port and town."

"First-class levels of service, excellent facilities and a wide range of cruise holidays available mean Dover will cater for all types of cruise traveller as well as contributing to the growth in European cruising that is winning new converts each season."

"Our repeat customers already know that there's no better way to start a European cruise than sailing into the sunset against a backdrop of the White Cliffs."

Hi-tech answers for a low-carbon future

A SCIENCE company has achieved a world first by developing an eco-friendly, carbon dioxide-capturing recycling technology.

Carbon8 Systems' unique accelerated carbonation process – 10 years in the making – captures CO₂ from landfill gas and also produces aggregate for the construction industry.

The Chatham Maritime-based team's new technology sees methane emitted by decomposing waste burnt in a specially-designed boiler to generate a CO₂-rich gas stream.

This is then used to treat the harmful ash left over from waste incineration to make concrete blocks.

Carbon8's managing director, Dr Paula Carey, said: "Accelerated carbonation has a significant environmental impact in that it prevents a hazardous waste going to landfill, reduces the need for natural aggregate and captures carbon dioxide from the environment, helping to fight climate change. Our technique not only renders polluted waste and soils inert, it is also low-cost and extremely fast – taking just minutes, rather than the days or even weeks required by other methods.

If widely adopted, these processes could be responsible for capturing more than one million tonnes of waste carbon dioxide and contributing to achieving the UK carbon emission reduction target."

The company has recently licensed the technology for the treatment of incinerator ashes in the UK to a new company, Carbon8 Aggregates, which is securing funding for its first commercial plant.

Exploring

Carbon8 Systems is now exploring opportunities in the US and Canada, where it already has patents, and in Europe and Australia, with assistance from UK Trade and Investment (UKTI).

UKTI South East's Terry Enga said: "The global market for low-carbon goods and services is an ever-growing one, already worth over £3 trillion and expected to exceed £4.5 trillion by 2015."

"The work and research conducted by the team at Carbon8 is truly pioneering."

"With the Government keen to reduce CO₂ emissions and carbon footprint, services like those at Carbon8 are going to be more in demand than ever before."

Smart wristbands coup at Coachella

A CONTRACT to supply hi-tech wristbands for a US music festival has been won by a Tunbridge Wells security firm.

ID&C will provide the radio frequency identification (RFID) wristbands for California's Coachella Festival, taking place this month.

RFID – used in Transport for London's Oyster cards – uses radio waves to exchange data between a reader and an electronic tag attached to an object, in this case a wristband.

ID&C's operations director Steve Dalys said: "Using RFID technology to improve security and reduce admission times at festivals is a concept we've been working on for years. Being able to see it in action at a festival like Coachella will be amazing."

"From a security point of view, the microchips can't be copied, making it difficult for pass-backs and counterfeiters."

"For fans, it's a non-invasive way of admittance, making the experience enjoyable from the moment they arrive."

ID&C has developed a durable, waterproof RFID-enabled wristband fitted with its patented Smartlock system, providing Coachella with what the firm calls "the ultimate security and admission solution".

The wristbands will work with hi-tech entrance gates, which read the unique frequency without physical contact.

The system can admit 2,000 fans per gate per hour, reducing staffing costs.

ID&C has supplied security wristbands for major UK festivals including Glastonbury, V and Kent's Hop Farm Festival.

ACCOUNTANCY practice A4G has launched a new profit and cashflow improvement service.

The firm, based in West Kingsdown, near Sevenoaks, hopes to help a range of recession-hit companies.

A4G's Steve Brown said: "This new service provides business-owners with the opportunity to examine the recent performance of their business and help to achieve profitable growth and improve their cash position."

"We will be looking to make your business more valuable as profits increase, reduce costs and help you sleep at night, knowing your business can meet its debts when they fall due. We offer 'Improve and Grow' sessions which are part of the service, and all who sign up for it will come away with an action plan of what will need to happen next, with the option of follow-up consultations."

The cost starts at £250, excluding VAT. Visit www.a4gsolutions.co.uk for more information.

THE team behind a successful school meals social enterprise is offering support to others wishing to follow suit.

Whole School Meals Ltd, which provides meals to 21 schools in east Kent, is holding a conference at St Margaret's Bay, near Dover, on Friday, May 13. Chairman Stephanie Hayman, who set the firm up in 2005 with support from local schools, said the model could be copied.

"The social-enterprise model has so much to offer," she said. "We are owned and controlled by our school community through their majority ownership of the company."

"Who better to ensure that we always maintain standards and never lose sight of our purpose? Although we must always be financially viable, we are able to spend more on the things we value - such as training for cooks and their teams, sourcing local produce, maximising use of fresh ingredients. And best of all, our profits go right back to the community."

The conference will be at Pines Calyx. For more information, visit www.wholeschoolmeals.co.uk.

NATWEST has appointed Jason Morgan as regional director of business banking throughout Kent and the Thames Gateway area.

Morgan (above, second left, with his newly-appointed team), will assume responsibility for all new business start-ups and business customers with an annual turnover up to £2 million.

He said: "I'm thrilled to have been given the opportunity to lead such a talented team. Their experience and knowledge will allow us to build on our reputation for supporting business customers."

LEGAL advisers Vertex Law have scooped a second industry award in as many months. The Kings Hill-based firm picked up the Regional M&A Law Firm of the Year prize at the DealMakers Global Awards.

Last month, they were confirmed as the winners of Kent Law Firm of the Year 2010 at the Corporate INTL Magazine Awards.

The firm's Salim Somjee said: "We are delighted our efforts continue to be recognised, both regionally and nationally."

CHRIS GRAYLING

Health and safety 'red tape' review

HEALTH and safety laws will be stripped down under new Government plans to ease the regulatory burdens on business.

Employment Minister Chris Grayling announced that a full review will be carried out with a view to scrapping any measures that are not needed.

Responsible employers will also no longer face automatic health-and-safety inspections, cutting the number of safety spot-checks by at least a third.

Grayling said: "Of course it is right to protect employees in the workplace, but Britain's health-and-safety culture is also stifling business and holding back growth. The purpose of health-and-safety regulation is to protect people at work, and rightly so. But we need common sense at the heart of the system and these measures will help root out the needless burden of bureaucracy."

"This will help us make Britain a more growth-focused, entrepreneurial nation. By reducing unnecessary red tape we can encourage businesses to come and invest in the UK, creating jobs and opportunities when we need them most."

Cameron pushes the enterprise button

LET'S GO:
Prime Minister David Cameron has launched the StartUp Britain campaign, which is backed by Kent University

A GOVERNMENT initiative to support and encourage the next generation of entrepreneurs has been backed by the University of Kent.

The new Entrepreneur First scheme will see business-minded students given support and guidance with help from leading employers.

It will also pay for the creation of enterprise societies in every university in the country.

The student scheme forms part of the wider StartUp Britain campaign, launched by Prime Minister David Cameron, which will see millions of pounds given to would-be entrepreneurs.

University of Kent enterprise director Carole Barron said: "These schemes will help pave the way for some of our brightest and best graduates to become the next wave of entrepreneurs."

"Universities like Kent are already creating the right climate to encourage entrepreneurial spirit - 91 per cent of higher-education institutions provide extra-curricular support for student and graduate entrepreneurship, and 80 per cent offer awards and modules leading to academic qualifications in enterprise and entrepreneurship."

"This announcement will provide further impetus for graduates to release their potential and learn entrepreneurial skills under the guidance of established employers. Here at the University of Kent we are doing everything possible to ensure that there are as few bureaucratic hurdles as possible to ensure our graduates are given the best opportunities to become successful entrepreneurs."

Unveiling the scheme, Mr Cameron said: "If you've been turning over a good idea for years, now is the time to make something of it."

"If you're working for a big firm but know you could do a better job on your own, now is the time to make the leap. If you're dreaming about starting up the next great British brand, now is the time to make it happen."

"There are thousands of people out there who are entrepreneurs, but they just don't know it yet."

"There are millions of success stories that haven't been written yet. So seize this moment. Take these opportunities. Make it happen and together we can drive our economy forward."

StartUp Britain has so far gathered the backing of international brands including Barclays, BlackBerry, Experian, Intel, Microsoft, McKinsey & Co and Virgin Media.

Policy 'undermines incentive to work'

NEW policy changes affecting the amount of cash that bankrupts can keep from their earnings will take away their incentive to work and put a greater strain on family life, says one of Kent's leading insolvency practitioners.

Amanda Ireland, who is also a partner at the Sittingbourne office of chartered accountants McCabe Ford Williams, said it was now even more essential that those in financial difficulty should seek expert advice from a licensed insolvency practitioner before deciding to make themselves bankrupt, or allowing creditors to force them into bankruptcy.

"I deal with cases every day where people are making a genuine effort to get their lives back to normal after accumulating large debts. Thankfully, we are able to help the vast majority of them, but these changes in policy remove the incentive to work hard," said Ireland.

The Insolvency Service policy used to be that the Official Receiver would look at the household income of a bankrupt and calculate what he deemed would be required to cover the "reasonable domestic needs" of the bankrupt and their family.

He would then claim between 50 and 75 per cent of any surplus income for the estate, the percentage being dependent on the level of surplus, with the bankrupt being allowed to retain the balance.

AMANDA IRELAND

"If the surplus was £50 or less, the Official Receiver made no claim on the funds," said Ireland.

With effect from December last year, the Official Receiver is reducing the minimum payment he would expect to receive from £50 to £20 and will only allow the bankrupt to retain £10 per month for emergencies for himself and each dependent.

"This onerous change takes away a bankrupt's incentive to work and is going to put even greater strain on family life," she said.

KOSmedia BUSINESS WEEK

THE BIG INTERVIEW

Business Week talks to JAMES TILLITT about his work in restoring the much-loved Astor Theatre in Deal back to its former glory. The Astor features strongly in the affections and memories of many residents of the seaside town.

After a career in theatre – and relocation to the Kent coast – US-born Tillitt took the decision to renovate the Astor to allow a venue for local activities and clubs, as well as a top-class performance space. While work continues, the Astor is once again among the premier facilities in east Kent. NICK AMES reports.

WHEN James Tillitt, a veteran of the stage, moved to the coastal town of Deal, he was immediately struck by how much affection local people had for its theatre.

At the time, the Astor was owned by Dover District Council and in a bad state of repair. "In fact, it was falling apart" he said.

"I thought what a terrible waste of such a valuable community resource."

So Tillitt decided to mount a rescue bid and for more than a year the town has seen the venue once again thriving. Classes and sessions are held on a daily basis and high-profile acts have sold out the theatre.

Now it is run as a Community Interest Company – which means any profit gained from ticket sales, the bar or merchandising is immediately ploughed back into running costs and improvement work, which is still ongoing.

No public funding or grants are available for the Astor, so it has to be completely self-sustainable. Tillitt is now artistic director – and said it was thanks to local residents and their enthusiasm that the arts centre was once more a focal point of Deal.

"It quickly became apparent that the Astor holds a very special place in the hearts of a lot of people who live in the town," he said.

"Almost everyone who lives locally has some special memory or connection with the place."

"I have had little old ladies come up to me and say they remember attending ballet classes in the 1950s."

"Then there are those who remember the 1970s and the disco nights. They might remember their first kiss, or their first drink."

"One man told me how he met his wife at the theatre."

But bringing the Astor back to former glories represented a major challenge and called on a mixture of theatrical know-how and business acumen on the part of Tillitt and those who supported his aims and objectives.

"I first bought a home in Deal 11 years ago," he said. "It was initially a place for the weekend. I was a 'down from London' type."

"But in 2006 I came here permanently and it was then I started to realise how important the theatre was."

"It wasn't being used very much at all and was, I have to say, extremely badly managed."

"Dover District Council were the owners and so I set about seeing how I could rescue it. The first stage was to get hold of the lease and I approached some like-minded people to come and work alongside me."

"I went to Dover [council] and said I would like to take on the theatre and it did take a while to persuade them, but we were awarded the lease in September 2008."

A group called Deal Arts Management, with Tillitt one of the prime movers, now had control of the Astor, subject to terms and conditions on how they went ahead with development work insisted on by councillors.

"Our first stage was to conduct a survey and we soon discovered the whole place needed to be rewired," said Tillitt.

"The old boiler had to be condemned and the basement was flooded. In fact, the whole place was barely fit to be used. So our first job was to get it to a stage where it was of a standard that meant the public could actually come inside."

So far about £130,000 has been spent on the theatre, but there is still some work to be done and fund-raising activities continue. There is a bucket for donations on the bar.

"We were very grateful for the help we received," said Tillitt. "About half the money we have spent up until now came in the form of grants from Dover District Council, Deal Town Council and Kent County Council."

"We raised our own funds through staging events and applying to grant-giving bodies."

"We received a very nice boost in the form of an anonymous donation of £20,000 from an individual and after seven months of restoration work we were able to open our doors to paying customers, in January 2010."

"We had a whole programme of events which ran right through until July of that year."

"The following month we closed down in order to finish off our work. This included repainting, relaying the floors and introducing new lighting."

GOOD SIGN: The Astor is thriving

Tillitt said he felt it was important that the Astor was used as much as possible, so activities take place in the day involving local groups, as well as performances of an evening.

"We have a huge range of things going on here and there really is something for everyone," he said.

"There are adult education classes, creative-writing courses, life drawing, youth theatre, a rock choir and a Gilbert and Sullivan society."

"We have a close association with a music label, Smugglers Records, and they stage a regular folk evening."

"One event that always sells out is the Private Widdle Social Club, an evening of entertainment which takes its name from one of the characters played in a Carry On film by Charles Hawtrey, a one-time Deal resident."

"There are also local bands performing, with Raw Deal – heavy metal and punk – a particularly popular night."

"We have ensured that we have booked some big bands. Nine Below Zero have played here, so have The Strawbs, The Blockheads, Dr Feelgood and Wishbone Ash. Hazel O'Connor is on this weekend [Saturday, April 2].

"Another event we are introducing is Talking Books, which involves an author speaking about his, or her, work to an audience."

"Simon Booker, Deborah Moggach and Melanie McGrath, who are all local writers, are set to take part, as are The History Girls, three women authors who specialise in historical fiction. They will be explaining how to take real people from the past and make a fictional story about them."

"We also work alongside Canterbury Christ Church University. Music students put on performances to gain experience of playing in front of an audience."

"The theatre holds 150 if we put in rows of seats. Cabaret-style seating, which includes tables, means 120 people can be accommodated, while if it's standing room only, capacity is 350."

"Our latest project has been an arts space and bar which has just opened with a photographic exhibition."

Tillitt feels that the Astor is now back firmly in its previous place, as a major part of a town with a growing arts scene and with many writers, painters, photographers and musicians among its residents.

"It has become a focal point for the community once again," he said. "Everyone here has rallied round and been behind what we have done and they have all been a part of it."

"I'm proud of what we have achieved and to have this sort of arts centre in a town the size of Deal and with the support of all the community is a rare thing. It is very gratifying, but the whole project has been a real challenge to get where we are now, to say the least."

High praise as restored hotel's Regency charm pleases minister

A RESTORED seafront hotel has been relaunched with the help of the Government's tourism minister.

John Penrose was on hand to open the 81-bed Best Western Dover Marina Hotel and Spa.

The tourism and heritage chief paid tribute to owner Leaf Hotels for its work in restoring the building to its Regency best.

"This is a listed building and it has been sensitively and carefully renovated. It is clear you have honoured the heritage and history of this fine old building," he said.

"At the same time you have managed to create what is clearly going to be one of the premier hotels in the area.

"This is a facility Dover and Kent will be proud of. I wish we had more people of vision in our tourism industry.

"We need people like Leaf Hotels, we need more people who are prepared to do precisely what you have achieved here."

The hotel, formerly known as The Churchill, caters for weddings, meetings and conferences, plus theme nights and fine-dining parties, private dining and other functions.

General manager David Otteson said: "With views across the beach and harbour to the Channel and beyond, we have an unrivalled location close to ferry and cruise terminals and Dover marina. The hotel is full of character and charm and ideal for business and leisure."

Leaf Hotels directors Mr Rajamenon, Mr Rajaseelan and Mr Rajakanthan said they had been overwhelmed by messages of support at the hotel's opening.

FINE OUTLOOK: Tourism minister John Penrose enjoys the view from the balcony after opening the Best Western Dover Marina Hotel and Spa. INSET: With Leaf Hotels directors

Mr Rajamenon said: "Dover is the gateway to Britain and that is why it is so important the town has high-quality tourist attractions and hotels, so visitors are given a good reason to stop and enjoy what the area has to offer."

"We are keen to play our part in that and want other people involved in the tourist industry in the area to work more closely together so we do not miss out on the benefits of international tourism.

Mr Rajaseelan said: "The town deserves to have the best hotels and we believe huge benefits will come from this project."

"We want it to become the centre of the community. We also want local businesses to see the Dover Marina Hotel and Spa as the place to come for a meeting or a conference, to meet with clients and associates."

Awards take some beating

KENT Invicta Chamber of Commerce has introduced a rhythmical feature into its annual awards – an audience-participation drumming session.

Finalists were invited to add to the beat laid down by the Drum Café African drumming group.

A spokesman said: "The group revealed that under the tables was a drum for each person at the table."

"Everybody joined in with enthusiasm and, led and encouraged by the drummers, soon picked up basic skills they never knew they had."

The top award on the night, business of the year, went to Bedfont Scientific, with Reeves & Co and Mather & Smith named as finalists.

Most promising new business was Recruitment Genius; and Entrepreneur of the year went to Dan Maudhub, of the Wonderful Creative Agency.

Chamber chairwoman Jo James said: "I hope everybody enjoyed themselves – I certainly did. The quality and quantity of applications received each year goes to show what an entrepreneurial county we work in."

The awards ceremony was held at Canterbury Cathedral Lodge.

Striking the right balance with 'impressive' Budget

By SIMON ROBINSON

simon.robinson@kosmedia.co.uk

CHANCELLOR George Osborne's second Budget has been welcomed by Kent Science Park, with businesses particularly impressed by a £100 million UK science-sector funding pot.

James Speck, director at the Sittingbourne park, said the cash would help support the UK's scientific firms and make them more competitive against their overseas peers.

Subsidiary measures such as the reduction in corporation tax were also praised.

Speck said: "It's good to see the Government is committed to UK science. The £100 million of capital spending announced is a welcome boost for the scientific sector at a time when money is hard come by."

Priority

"However, the rest of the world, and in particular China and Germany, continue to invest heavily in science and it's important that, as the deficit is reduced, R&D spending remains a Government priority to ensure that we do not fall behind our competitors."

"The new research and development tax credit proposal and increases to tax credit will be another boost for the UK."

"I believe the Chancellor is striking a good balance between managing the personal hardships that many people are feeling because of the spending cuts and supporting business in a way that will establish the framework for economic recovery."

"The reduction in corporation tax by 2 rather than 1 per cent is a welcome surprise. It sends a signal to the world that the UK is a good place to come and do business and I applaud the Chancellor's efforts to create the most competitive tax system in the G20.

"The freezing of new regulations for start-ups and businesses employing fewer than 10 people for the next three years is good news."

"I know from speaking to our tenants that this will help to take some of the pressure off by minimising the amount of red tape they encounter and letting them get on with expanding their business."

Crowe Clark Whitehall tax partner Simon Warne was also impressed with the Budget.

"Most companies will view the Budget as business-friendly thanks to the decision to cut corporation tax," he said.

"The measures to give earlier relief for capital expenditure via the short-life asset regime will be welcomed by hard-pressed business-owners. The increased R&D relief will focus business minds on innovation, as will the patent box regime, expected to apply a 10 per cent rate of corporation tax on income from patents from April 2013," he said.

"Kent appears to have missed out on the first of the newly-created enterprise zones, although we may yet benefit."

The Marketing Eye's managing director, Neil Edwards, was wary of rising inflation and the expected rise in interest rates.

"George Osborne is saying a lot of the things that small businesses want to hear. Making Britain the best place to start up, finance and grow a small business has to be the right aim," he said.

"However, service businesses in the South East never seem to get a mention and we need a helping hand, too."

"For our business to grow, we need confidence in the economy and people willing to invest in their businesses."

"Despite Osborne talking about 'economic stability', there is still a lot of uncertainty out there. Rising inflation rates and threats of increases in interest rates don't help."

"In the absence of confidence, we need our costs held down and the ability to leave as much profit in the business as we can to re-invest – not paying it all out in tax."

Creaseys partner Richard Holme said: "We were encouraged to learn that corporation tax is to be cut by 2 per cent, rather than the 1 per cent originally announced, and then cut to 23 per cent by 2014."

Highlight

"This can only be good news for business and will, hopefully, encourage investment."

Another key highlight is that investments under the enterprise investment scheme will attract tax relief of 30 per cent.

"This is a good step in the right direction to getting people to invest in small and growing business. This is essential to kick-start the economy and will also encourage serial entrepreneurs to keep investing. Investment is key to success."

"As a firm which works closely with a number of charities, we were encouraged by the announcement of a 10 per cent inheritance tax discount for those leaving 10 per cent of their estate to charity."

"The charity sector is suffering at the moment, so anything that can be done to give it a boost is good news."

"It's also positive for people who wish to leave part of their estate to charity."

SOFTWARE provider Access UK is gearing up for a period of rapid expansion after securing a £50 million deal with growth investor Lyceum Capital.

The established firm – which has nine offices across the UK, including its HR and payroll arm in Canterbury – will use the huge sum to grow the business, buy out complementary firms and continue product development.

Chief executive Chris Bayne, left, said: "It's fitting that on the 20th anniversary of Access's incorporation we've agreed a deal which marks a significant step change in the speed and scale of the business's expansion and secured the backing of an investment partner with an outstanding track record of generating sustainable growth."

"We'll be focused on the continued development of our market-leading product and service portfolio through a combination of in-house development and the targeted acquisition of complementary solutions and will be looking to further develop our offering across the mid-market space."

Jeremy Hand, who led the deal for Lyceum Capital, said: "Access is a highly attractive company with a successful operating model, proven management team and a strong position in the rapidly growing business segment of the software market. This deal will give the business the funding and additional insight and expertise to broaden its services and penetrate further into key vertical industries."

Access is a software, solutions and consultancy house that provides a full range of enterprise-resource-planning software and services, with a particular focus on financial management systems and human-capital management solutions.

It serves a 5,000-strong mid-market client base spread across a range of sectors and includes Canterbury College, the King's School and Cripps Harries Hall LLP. Set up in 1991, Access has grown to become a £28m turnover business. The firm has nine offices across the UK and Ireland and employs more than 300 people.
